U.S. and Britain Divided on Views On Big Four Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Britain are reported divided over whether to agree to discuss general international tensions with Russia at a proposed Big Four meeting on Germany.

Diplomatic officials report that Britain favors such an agreement and the United States does not. France was described as tending to support the United States view.

The division has developed at the very outset of three-power talks at Paris on a new note to Moscow regarding a Big Four session. The situation reflects the same basic difference between London and Washington over how to deal with the Communist bloc which has characterized their clashing policies on Korea in the present United Nations assembly session.

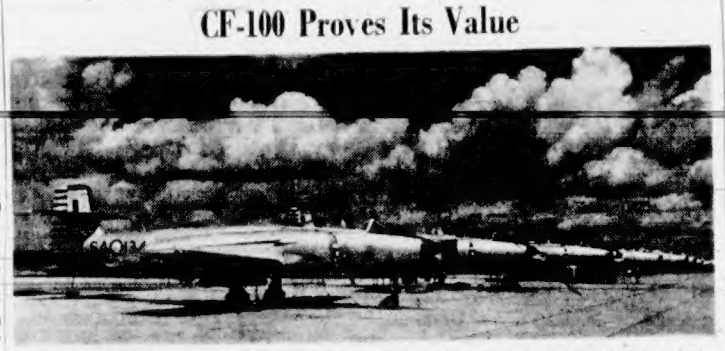

At the UN, Britain has favored a kind of round-table conference to follow up the Korean armistice and has stood for the inclusion of both Russia and India. The United States has been willing to accept Russia only as a member of the Communist group at the proposed negotiations and has objected to including any neutral such as India.

In other words, the United States has wanted the Korean political conference to be a meeting of two sides concerned with Korean unification and not a round-table session which might roam over a variety of Far Eastern issues such as the future of Formosa and UN membership for Red China.

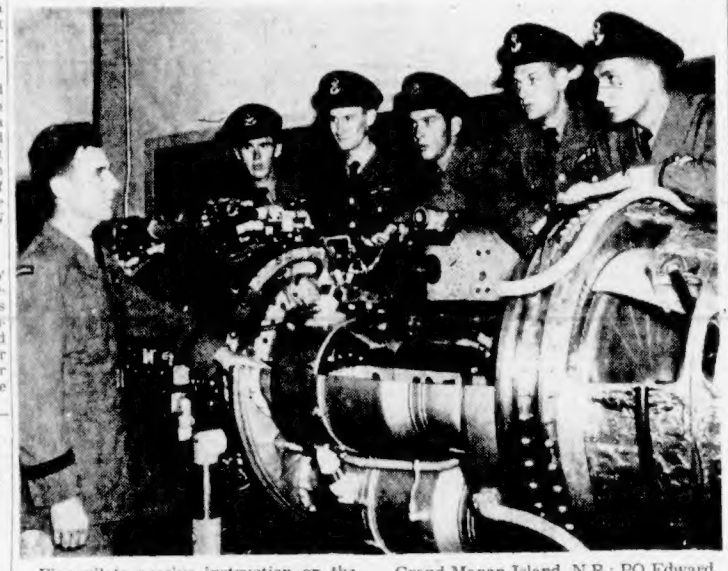

AGREEMENT EXPECTED

Diplomats here said that they were reasonably certain that despite their different approaches to writing a new note to Russia on Germany, the United States and Britain, together with France, will be able rather quickly to agree on a line to be taken.

CF-100 Proves Its Value

The Royal Canadian Air Force took wraps off its new jet-interceptor plane, the CF-100, at the North Bay, Ont., air base Thursday. A six-hour ground-and-air demonstration convinced visiting witnesses, including newsmen, that the all-weather aircraft is all it is reputed to be. Here is a line-up of the planes on the North Bay tarmac.

Scientist Warns Of Deadly C-Bomb

Destruction of Mankind Possible by Single Blast

LONDON (UP)—A British nuclear scientist warned the world Saturday to watch out for the C-bomb.

The bomb would be a deadly refinement of the hydrogen bomb, which the Russians have learned to produce along with the United States.

Now that the atomic method of destruction appears to have struck a balance on both sides of the Iron Curtain, some physicists have quietly put aside their data on the A-bomb and H-bomb. They have started, instead, a new docket under the initial "C" for cobalt, according to the scientist who asked not to be identified.

STILL ONLY IDEA

The cobalt bomb, as far as can be ascertained, is still only an idea. But the scientist said its operation would depend on "simple and well-established" principles which leave little doubt as to its feasibility.

The idea is to make a bomb big enough and powerful enough to release a radioactive dust that would contaminate most of the world and stay active for a year or more.

The scientist said the bomb would be made from cobalt which costs about $2,000 a ton.

According to this informant, the C-bomb could be made in three parts beginning with an ordinary A-bomb in the centre.

The whole contraption would then be packed in a thick shell of cobalt which would be blasted into a fine dust giving a "penetrating radiation lasting for at least a year."

The scientist estimated about 10,000 tons of cobalt would be enough to make a radioactive dust settle everywhere, both in and out of doors, and remain lethal over a protracted period.

VARIED DISTRIBUTION

But he believes it unlikely that a uniform distribution could be achieved everywhere. Some parts of the earth's surface could remain "relatively free" while others would receive a bigger dose.

He is convinced, however, that the next step along the road to scientific destruction will be toward the C-bomb.

Idea Born In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The possibility of a race-killing C-bomb was first suggested by an American scientist, Prof. Leo Szilard.

Szilard estimated that an H-bomb containing 500 tons of heavy hydrogen could radioactivate enough cobalt, built into the bomb as a liner, to make all human beings gradually sicken and die.

FOUR PREMISES

He based his idea on four premises: (1) That enough heavy hydrogen and cobalt could be built into the bomb, or bombs, to meet the theoretical requirements, (2) that the bomb would go off, (3) that the radioactive cobalt dust resulting from the explosion would settle uniformly on the earth, and (4) that some people, in order to kill off all other peoples, would be willing to kill themselves.

He suggested the possibility that Russia might develop such a bomb and use its existence to back up an ultimatum to the United States.

Szilard's idea was disclosed at a University of Chicago round table broadcast in February, 1950.

EXHAUSTIVE ANALYSIS

Dr. James R. Arnold of the University of Chicago Institute for Nuclear Studies subjected Szilard's figures to exhaustive analysis and produced the conclusion that to generate fatal radioactive dust in the amounts stipulated, it would be necessary to use, in one bomb or many, around 10,000 tons of heavy hydrogen and 100,000 tons of cobalt.

To make such a bomb would require "a full-scale effort by a major country over many years," Arnold said.

Storm Toll High in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Violent rain and wind storms which have swept central and southern Chile the past four days have taken a toll of 33 dead, many injured and hundreds homeless. Property damage has been large.

Coast Area Combed In Aerial Search

VANCOUVER (CP)—Search planes investigating latest clues in the disappearance of a New Mexico oilman and four other persons had only negative results to report Saturday.

Twenty-nine U.S. and Canadian service planes were in the air along with a number of private craft. Saturday's search, aided by clear weather, extended over thousands of square miles of territory around the point where Ellis Hall, his wife, two daughters and 17-year-old Patrick Hibben disappeared in Hall's plane Monday.

Still being followed up were reports by loggers on northern Revillagigedo Island they had seen a ball of fire Monday night. A fishtrap tender, operating a few miles from the loggers, said he had heard a plane's engines die out suddenly that evening and a search plane saw two trees with clipped tops, which might have been broken by a plane.

The plane vanished on a flight from Annette Island to Bellingham, Wash. The search has been concentrated in the vicinity of Annette.

Meanwhile, a second private plane is reported missing in northern British Columbia. Search and rescue officials in Vancouver said that a single-engined aircraft piloted by a bush pilot named Peterson of Atlin, B.C., has been missing since Thursday.

North River Yields Body Of Fisherman

BURNS LAKE, B.C. (BUP)—RCMP at Burns Lake Saturday night disclosed that the body of Fred T. Whiting, of Chicago, vice-president of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, has been found in the icy waters of the Morice River in northern B.C., where he had been trout fishing.

An RCMP corporal, with a game warden and a big game guide, found the body Saturday afternoon after about 10 hours of dragging the river. A coroner's inquiry has been held. The cause of death was drowning. There is no suspicions of foul play.

The body will be flown to Seattle today.

Hungry Prisoners Return to Cells

MONROE, Wash., (AP)—Famished but still sullenly defiant, 150 young prisoners who took part in Thursday's riot and arson were herded back to their cells Saturday at the Washington State Reformatory.

For two nights and most of two days they had been kept clustered on the reformatory baseball field under a ring of guard's guns.

Their only food was a little in cans taken from the reformatory cannery the night of the riot, when five buildings were put to the torch and destroyed. They had water, but nothing else to drink.

Once inside, they wolfed down sandwiches and hot coffee.

The return to their cells had been delayed while reformatory officials made a thorough search of all buildings for hidden weapons. A varied collection of homemade and reformatory kitchen knives was turned up.

Single file, the rioters were given careful "shakedown" before they were allowed back in the cellhouses. No weapons were found. Any they had were believed buried in the yard.

Four of the rioters were missing from the ranks of those outside. One was killed and three wounded Thursday night when guards said a group tried to rush the walls.

GIs Jubilant, ROKs Furious On Release

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The Communists released 150 shouting and laughing Americans from Red prison camps Sunday and told the United Nations command another 150 would be sent home Monday.

While the Americans exchanged Sunday generally were in high spirits, Republic of Korea troops coming back from the Red northland were burning mad.

Some shook their fists and cursed Red Korean officers at the exchange point in angry demonstrations.

South Korean Red Cross workers said the Republic of Korea troops demanded that the Reds release all of the ROK soldiers being held in the north.

Earlier accounts said thousands of South Koreans were being held back to do forced labor for the Reds, including building airfields and rehabilitating war wrecked buildings and railroads.

Verdict Still Awaited On CPA Application

BY TOM GREEN
The Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, August 22—Official sources said here Saturday night it is unlikely that the decision of the government in the matter of the application of Canadian Pacific Airlines to operate an air cargo service between Vancouver and Montreal, will be given out for at least one month and possibly two.

The hearings, which occupied nearly a month, were held in March before the air transport board, with Trans-Canada Airlines opposing the application. The board studied the large amount of evidence and sent a digest and recommendation to Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier some time in June.

However, the Coronation and the general election kept the government from giving attention to the matter. Now it is understood the subject will come up for discussion by the cabinet, not at its next meeting which is cheduled for September 9, but at a later meeting.

In the past the feeling of the government has been that TCA was the "chosen instrument" and that it would require a very powerful argument for the administration to change its mind.

Under the present law the air transport board does not have the power to grant an airline, which is also a surface carrier, a charter.

Bomb Threat Brings Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—William Wetteskow, 30, was charged in police court Saturday with trying to blast his way into a job, and was remanded one week for medical examination.

Churchill Title London Rumor

LONDON (CP) — The mass circulation Sunday Pictorial says Queen Elizabeth is thinking of offering Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill a Dukedom. This would ease Churchill, who is not in good health, into the House of Lords.

In the past Churchill is reported to have refused all offers of elevation to the peerage as he could then no longer be prime minister.

A dukedom is the second highest rung in British aristocracy. Only dukes "of the royal blood" have higher ranking. Churchill is a descendant of the Duke of Marlborough.

Rumors that Sir Winston would retire have circulated around London since June 27 when his doctors announced he had been ordered to take a long rest to avoid a complete physical breakdown.

Atomic Control Hope 'Dim' in View of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department believes prospects for international control of atomic energy are "dim" because of Russia's uncompromising stand on the question.

Nevertheless, it says the United States still favors international control and will cooperate with the United Nations or any effective plan.

The statements came from Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, acting secretary of state, in the wake of confirmation here that the Soviets have succeeded in exploding some kind of hydrogen device.

Smith's report was made public Saturday by the office of Senator Paul Wiley (Rep., Wis.), chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who is in New York attending the UN Assembly.

ASSURANCE ASKED

Wiley had asked for assurance from the state department that the "full impact" of increasing atomic programs in foreign lands "is adequately reflected in our current military and diplomatic plans and policies."

In his reply, Smith recommended a greater exchange of atomic energy information with allied countries, adding that this did not necessarily mean the disclosure of classified information.

Malenkov Blasts Adenauer

LONDON (AP)—The Kremlin Sunday accused West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of leading Germany down the road to war in a bitter broadcast blast by Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov.

It made a new call for a quick German peace conference.

Malenkov's speech was addressed to East German Government leaders who were summoned to Moscow last week for urgent talks at the Kremlin. They have been entertained lavishly since their arrival in Moscow Thursday night.

Danger Signs Explained

Residents in the 1500 block Fort have been mystified by the large red-lettered sign on the Dardanelles appartment block which says: "Danger. Keep out."

Rumors were rife in the area. One persistent theory was that a gas main had broken and the block was full of escaping gas.

Allies Fear Soviet Trap In Air Plan

BERLIN (AP)—The Western Allies are turning down Russia's proposal for just one big air corridor to Berlin because they fear it might prove a trap in case of another blockade, an informed Allied source disclosed Saturday.

The West proved once—during the 1948-49 blockade—that it could feed Berlin by air through the existing system of three 20-mile-wide corridors across Soviet-occupied East Germany.

Confession Made in Vancouver

Man Claims He Killed Boy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police spent Saturday checking the story of a 33-year-old man who walked into headquarters and confessed to the killing of an eight-year-old boy almost six years ago.

Refusing to identify the man, the police quoted him as saying he was responsible for the slaying of the boy, Roddy Moore, who was bludgeoned to death while on his way home from school, October 18, 1847. The murder was unsolved. Medical authorities testified it was not a sex crime.

Police said the man they are holding admitted he was recently released from a mental institution. He is the first man to be held in connection with the brutal killing since the boy's body was found in underbrush, following a search by hundreds of police and volunteers, following the killing.

GAVE WRONG NAME

Police Chief Walter Mulligan said the suspect walked into headquarters Friday night and said "I'm the man who murdered Roddy McDonald."

He later corrected the name, and said "I'm the man who killed Roddy Moore," the chief said.

The man admitted he had been only recently released from a mental hospital, and also had been treated in several others, giving rise to the belief that his confession may be a fake.

"He may be a complete nut, and his story totally untrue, but we try to leave no stone unturned in Vancouver's unsolved murders," said the chief.

Dozen Parliamentarians First To Exchange Pay Cheques for Pensions

OTTAWA (CP) — About a dozen retired or defeated veterans of Parliament have exchanged pay cheques for pensions worth as much as $3,000 a year.

The former members are the first parliamentarians in Canadian history to receive retiring allowances in recognition of past service to their country.

The pension plan, restricted to members of the House of Commons, was approved by Parliament last year. Under the Pension Act, members contribute six per cent of their annual indemnity into a fund to a maximum of $4,000. A matching contribution is made by the government.

The retired or defeated members who will get the pension in varying amounts are those who sat in more than two parliaments and paid into the fund for earlier service.

However, another 20-odd members of the last House who retired or were defeated will not receive pensions. These members either lack sufficient service or have been appointed to the Senate or bench.

Members named to the Senate or other public offices may withdraw their pension contributions or leave them in the fund. This would enable them to collect a pension when their present office terminates.

Defeated members with insufficient service to qualify for a pension may also collect their contributions, less interest. They may however leave their contributions in the fund in the hope of being re-elected in the future.

Former members with insufficient service who were defeated and do not qualify for pension include J. L. Gibson, Independent, Comox-Alberni.

Payments into the pension fund up to last March 31 totalled about $500,000, including contributions by members and the government.

Contributions by members became payable in January, 1953, and in three months they paid in $40,708 which was matched by the government. A number of members also made arrangements to pay their contributions for past service to enable them to collect full pension if they were defeated in the election.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

MANY people dislike the alternative vote. They are willing to say "yes" or "no" to a candidate. They are not willing to say "maybe."

The idea of the alternative vote is so easy that everyone above the age of two can understand it. You vote for one candidate. If he can't get in, you are willing to accept the next best candidate. So you vote for him, second choice.

If the next best candidate can't get in, you vote for the next one after that, third choice.

That is simple enough, isn't it? Not simple enough for some people, however. Some people say "let's get back to the good old-fashioned voting" system, the kind a man could understand."

To satisfy the Old Brigade, you have to mark your candidate's name with an "X." If you favor one candidate, you can not even think of another.

According to the ideas of the Old Brigade, one man must be all right, the others must be all wrong.

And yet, is the Old Brigade so mistaken? Our morality teaches that there is such a thing as right and wrong. If our morality is a true picture of things as they are, and if men can be found to interpret it faithfully, then a man can vote only one way.

In real life, however, both men and systems of ethics can be anywhere up to 180 degrees off course. At least, I think they can. The voter's only standard of values is this:

"Which candidate, and which party, offers the nearest to what I want?"

In a democracy, the criterion is not "What is Right?" but "What do I want?" If enough people want the same thing, then their representative must try to get it for them.

Meanwhile, however, political leaders are supposed to be reflecting upon what is "right," from various points of view.

* * *

An observer says the Social Credit government may do away with the alternative vote.

"Premier Bennett, who to date has only hinted at abolition of alternative voting, wants a return to the old system to make more sure of by-election victories for Finance Minister Einar Gunderson and Education Minister Tilly Rolston."

This analysis of his motives or intentions may be right, or it may not. If the alternative vote is abolished for any such frivolous reason, it will be a very bad service to the people of British Columbia.

If it is abolished at all, in fact, it will be a backward step. All voters with any sense want the chance to choose the next best candidate, if they can not elect their own.

Police Car Involved In Accident

A police car driven by Constable Alister Boyd was involved in a slight accident at Johnson Street bridge Friday.

The patrol car stopped in a line of traffic when it was hit in the rear by a car driven by Fergus T. Heywood, 1575 McRae Avenue, police reported. Medium damage was caused the Heywood vehicle.

SIMILAR ACCIDENT

A similar accident occurred the same day on Wharf Street, a car driven by Lloyd Scott, 1194 Old Esquimalt Road, stopping in a line of traffic, was struck in the rear by a car driven by Robert N. Robinson, HMCS Naden, police said. About $150 damage was caused the Robinson car.

Allan O. Jeffrey, of HMCS Naden, was fined $25 or five days after pleading guilty to driving without a current driver's license, before Magistrate A. I. Thomas in city police court Saturday.

Jim Nesbitt On Politics

Mr. Nesbitt, well-known writer and broadcaster on political and historical affairs, is a frequent contributor to the Daily Colonist.

The bizarre predicament of Social Credit MLA Percy Wright down in city hall has all the elements of a deep, dark mystery novel of strange politics, with all sorts of overtones so sharp they're almost discordant.

Whatever is going in city hall? Who's calling the tune? Is there some sort of a political plot in the strange case of poor Mr. Wright? Is poor Mr. Wright a victim, or is he in on the know, if there is any know?

FREE OF POLITICS

For years the folks in city hall stayed clear of politics. "Keep politics out of city hall" was a popular cry. It worked until along came Social Credit. Now city hall is full of Social Credit politics — or, well, if not politics, it's certainly got its share of Social Credit politicians.

Yes, times have changed in city hall. The old place fair rocks with politics, plans and plots, whispers and manoeuvres of one kind or another. Everybody in city hall — or let's say several of them — have eyes on higher places, such as B.C. Legislature and House of Commons. Well, that's all right; what's wrong with ambition?

But as to the strange case of poor, young Mr. Wright; last April the mayor and council told him he could run for the legislature, as a Social Crediter, and still hold his job. They said sure, go ahead, 'young fella', go ahead and run and best of luck to you.

So out went ambitious young Mr. Wright and ran, and he beat Liberal Mr. Straith, a monumental task in itself, for Mr. Straith is a power in this community, and Mr. Wright practically unknown outside city hall. It shows what a Social Credit tide can do.

At the same time the mayor was acting coyly and letting it be known he'd like to be drafted by Social Credit, and Ald. Skillings wasn't being coy at all, but belligerent in his desire to get a Social Credit nomination for somewhere, anywhere, it didn't matter.

RAN AS INDEPENDENT

Well, we know the results of all these goings-on at city hall. The mayor, snubbed by Social Credit, ran for the legislature as an Independent, and was licked, and Mr. Skillings, snubbed once, finally was able to run as Social Crediter for House of Commons, and he, too, was licked, and yet a humble clerk in city hall was able to make it.

We may well imagine the secret feelings of triumph that surged through young Mr. Wright's breast at these defeats, though he's much too polite and diplomatic to express anything but the deepest sorrow. The mayor and Ald. Skillings are Mr. Wright's bosses, and yet, here's young Mr. Wright an MLA, a law-maker far senior to any mayor or alderman. Quite a situation, isn't it?

However, all was going well in city hall until Mr. Wright asked the mayor for leave of absence so that he could sit in the legislature at the coming session. Suddenly a lot of red tape got unwound in city hall and somehow the mayor got all tangled up in it, and he has written to Mr. Wright to say no leave of absence. The mayor has mumbled something about the city manager not approving such leaves. Good gracious, since when has the mayor started paying any attention to the city manager and what he thinks?

So, there's Mr. Wright in the silly position of being an MLA, and yet not knowing whether he can sit in the House? Why did the mayor give Mr. Wright permission to run if it's not proper he should take his seat? Did the mayor think Mr. Wright would be beaten?

And one of the strangest parts of this whole strange story is the complete unconcern of poor, young Mr. Wright. He doesn't seem to care, one way or another.

DEEP, DARK PLOT?

Now, is this where the deep, dark plot comes in? Naturally, Mr. Wright, being a smart young man, isn't going to throw up his sure and steady job at city hall, and its pension, to take up the shaky existence of a politician. Oh no, he won't do that. Yet, if he doesn't, it appears he will have to resign his legislative seat.

Well, now isn't that interesting? There are several big-wigs in city hall who are Social Credit big-wigs, and they're chummy with Social Credit big-wigs in the Legislative Buildings, and Mr. Gunderson, the minister of finance, hasn't a legislative seat, and Premier Benett wants him to have one, and Mr. Wright might have to resign, and so there'd be a by-election, and Mr. Gunderson, having nothing better to do, might just as well run.

But all this, surely, is fantastic! It's surely too wild to be true. Yet, you never know these days! Politicians have always been contemptuous of the people, once safely in office, but surely this is too wild, surely there can be no such secret alliance between city hall and Legislative Buildings. No, no, no, there just can't be. But still—when you look at it—

And won't it be interesting to see what happens to Mr. Wright, until now a quiet cog in city hall wheel, and suddenly catapulted into the starring role of our newest, and certainly one of our most intriguing political dramas.

Another political mystery is that vacant B.C. Senate seat in Ottawa. Whoever is Prime Minister St. Laurent holding it for?

NOT MUCH USE

Surely, if the Senate's of any use at all, all the seats should be filled. But then, of course, everybody knows the Senate's of not much use, that it's just an exclusive club, with a pension, $6,000 a year. No wonder everybody wants to get into that club.

But who, who, who, is the Senate vacancy being held for? If Mrs. Hodges hadn't been defeated provincially in June she'd have been in the Senate now. Mr. St. Laurent wanted a woman from this province, by way of wooing women's votes, and what woman, according to Liberal theories, has better earned a Senate seat than Mrs. Hodges?

Senate reform indeed! There's always talk of Senate reform, but nothing is ever done. It's now worse than ever. With a few exceptions, every Senator is a Liberal. In the next few years the Senate will become all Liberal—just a happy hunting ground for Liberal politicians who have served the party well and faithfully and earned their reward of $6,000 a year for life, and, joy of joys, no bothersome elections to fight.

If only the PM would fill that vacant seat there'd be one less political mystery to plague us out here in B.C., where we seem to have more minor political mysteries than any other place in the land.

Government House is a bit perplexed about the legislative session opening September 15. What to do about entertainment? It's the second session in a year, and even one session comes tough on the Lieutenant-Governor's pocket book, even though there's no reason to believe it's a lean one.

STRICTLY PLUSH AFFAIRS

But two state dinners and a state ball and luncheons for the wives of MLAs aren't peanut butter sandwich affairs, with paper serviettes. They're filet mignon, the right wine with the right course, fingerbowls, butler and maids. Government House went through this routine last spring; it seems hardly fair that the same routine should have to be tackled again this autumn.

About the only break the L.G. gets when it comes to putting on a big party is liquor at cost from government warehouses. That's quite a saving, and lots of people would dearly love this privilege, but still, it doesn't make up for the hundreds of hungry patrons wolfing chicken sandwiches and French pastries.

Government House won't talk yet about what's to be done to solve this high society impasse. But it's easy to guess there won't be any state dinners and state ball and MLA's wives' luncheons this session.

There'll probably be some kind of compromise — probably a high tea (with a drink or two of that tax-free booze) following the House opening.

MLAs and high society figures will be disappointed. MLAs love to swank at a state dinner and ball in the governor's mansion, so they might impress the folks back home; high society figures like to be invited so they can rub it into their uninvited friends and neighbors.

Several Important Discoveries

Women Pasternak's Work

BY SYLVIA LAMOND

LONDON (NANA) — "Women," said Joe Pasternak, "are my life's work and my hobby."

Short, dapper, dynamo Joe is Hollywood's champion picker of women. He has "discovered" and groomed for stardom a galaxy of beauty, including Esther Williams, Lana Turner, Deanna Durbin and Kathryn Grayson.

"It's a hobby of mine," he explained. "I walk round the streets and in and out of cafes and shops looking for a girl I could make a film around. I decide how I'd exploit her talent and get a kick out of imagining the finished product."

PLANS OUTLINED

First he looks at the mouth. Full lips show warmth. A woman's mouth should be mobile, not tight. She should laugh easily.

Next he studies the walk.

"No woman can begin to be attractive if she creeps into a room hoping nobody will notice her. She's got to walk with an easy swing, head well up, taking a lively interest in what's going on around her."

Then he looks for intelligence in the eyes, and finally at the clothes.

SIMPLE CLOTHES BEST

"I've never yet met the woman who didn't look her best in the simplest clothes—preferably a straight skirt and blouse or sweater.

"Confidence is the quality a woman needs more than any other to be attractive," he emphasized.

"There is no such thing as a 'plain woman,'" stated the expert suddenly. "There are only women who think they're plain.

"Beauty is not regularity of features. The conception of beauty changed from the post-card perfection of 25 years ago. Today a woman is attractive because of her personality, and naturalness and love of life.

ESTHER WILLIAMS

"Take Esther Williams as an example. She's too tall and big and her shoulders are like a man's and her face is like the girl's next door. But Esther gives out sparks because she's happy and completely natural.

"She laughed at me when I discovered her and wanted to put her in pictures. She said she can't do anything but swim and anyway I want to marry and have children.' Well, she's married and she keeps on having children and I get wild every time because I've always got another picture lined up. But that's Esther," beamed Joe.

Questions and Answers

Peach trees from stones: G.F.L., Oak Bay—Peach trees raised from stones take much longer to come into bearing than those which are propagated by budding or grafting. A seven-year-old tree, however, should be bearing by next year. If it fails again to flower, you had better lift it in the autumn, shorten the strong, vigorous roots, and replant in soil enriched with superphosphate, eight tablespoonfuls to the square yard.

Practically every peach tree in Victoria gets the peach leaf curl disease eventually if the mid-winter spray is ngelected.

Poultry manure: C.R.H., Ladysmith—Poultry droppings are excellent for the garden, although very strong, and likely to burn the crops if applied too heavily. They may be dug into vacant ground at the rate of three pints per square yard while fresh, or they may be dried off and pulverized into a powder, stored, and used as a side dressing to growing crops at the rate of half a cupful a yard run. Poultry manure is excellent as an activator in a compost heap, applying half-inch layers between six-inch layers of compost materials, and will speed up the composting process considerably.

WATER LILIES

Planting water lilies: H.J.R., Victoria—The usual mixture for planting water lilies is two parts by bulk of strong, rich loam and one part well-rotted cow manure. Never use straw or unrotted organic material in the mixture—it poisons the water.

Split plum tree: W.H.G., Victoria—Your plum tree with gum oozing through splits in the bark is bark-bound. Take a sharp knife and slit the bark from top to toe, which will relieve the pressure. Paint the cut over with thick white lead paint.

WALNUT HARVEST

Harvesting walnuts: R.H.V., Cowichan Station—Walnuts for pickling should be picked from the tree before the shells harden and while it is still possible to push a needle through them. For storing, wait until the nuts fall, and remove the husks. It is advisable to scrub away the fibrous material clinging to the nuts, as it may cause them to rot.

Neptune's fern: S.R.E., Esquimalt—I am afraid there is no way of propagating or increasing that bright green "air fern" you bought, as it is not alive. As a matter of fact, it is not a plant at all, but the skeleton of a sea animal which has been dyed green.

HEARING-AID OF THE WEEK

By B. S. H. TYE

Paravox Photoscription

By examining the Audiometer Card and the case history of the patient, Paravox, Inc., is able to produce a hearing-aid that will correct that hearing loss—one that will bring in the tones that ordinarily the patient fails to hear. When the hearing-aid has been made with the correct response curve to meet the hearing requirements of the patient, the performance curve is photographed on special equipment and the photograph is filed away for future reference. This type of fitting is called "Photoscription Service."

We are pleased to announce that our latest model all-transistor Paravox, the "TRANSonic," can now be fitted by photoscription. If you are one of those who is hard to fit, come to the Victoria Hearing-Aid Co. at 326 Yarrow Building, 625 Fort Street, have a Paravox TRANSonic made up to suit your individual requirements, and then try it out for several days before purchase. (This is the hearing-aid that on the average case will operate for less than two dollars per year for batteries).

Incas' Ancient Roadways Lead to Forgotten World

In co-operation with the American Geographical Society, Victor von Hagen, one of the world's leading experts on South American history and exploration, is directing an intensive two-year study of a forgotten world—the 2,000-mile highway of the ancient Incas. North American Newspaper Alliance has exclusive world rights to reports on the Inca highway expedition's progress.

BY VICTOR VON HAGEN

CUZCO, Peru (NANA)—Our expedition, following the Inca roadways scent — now grown cold after five centuries—has arrived at last in Cuzco. Cuzco, 11,007 feet above sea level was the sacred city of the Incas and is the oldest continuously inhabited city of all the Americas, having come into being about the time the English were counting their dead at the Battle of Hastings.

We reached Cuzco by following the modern dirt highway, a part of the Pan American highway system, which in great part overlays the ancient stone road that connected Cuzo with its southern provinces, stretching as far south as Argentina and Chile. En route we passed the remains of stone-built tampus, a way station erected by the Inca to give shelter to his troops and rest for authorized travelers on his road, we bathed in hot springs bubbling out of the frigid Andean earth utilizing the stone seats made for this Inca spa by the craftsmen of this fabulous megalithic empire.

At many points along the 200-mile stretch we saw the remains of the Inca road; at Combapata an ancient Inca Tampu, we saw eight centuries of man's progress—the bridge.

Lying together, almost side by side, were three bridges; the stone towers of the Inca bridge which once held up thick fiber cables; the ruins of a colonial Spanish bridge constructed of three Roman arches, and the modern bridge, made of steel and carrying the device "made in America."

We rolled through the famous Rumicolca gateway, the gigantic entrepot to the valley of Cuzco made of reddish well-worked stone—Inca masonry at its best; and there came across a section of the Inca road in pristine condition.

DELIGHT TO MEMBERS

It was a delight to all the members of the expedition to be again in altitudes at which they could work normally, even though we were close to two miles above sea level. Capt. Charles Daugherty, who complained that his instruments performed badly in the high altitudes that surround Lake Titicaca region, now was smiling into his beard. Richmond Lawrence, the cinemaphotographer, was glad to see his cameras again working with precision in the gentle Cuaco valley.

All members enjoyed the trees again. The archaeologist, Dr. Hans Disselhoff, found that the seroche headaches which have pursued him in all the treeless lands of the Puna above 14,000 feet altitude were gone.

As for my Brazilian wife, Silvia, used to the lush lands of tropical Brazil, who shivered every mile of dur way through the winter-bound lands which we had just left, declared that "she felt human" again. The whole valley was cultivated with corn, potatoes, wheat and rye; Willow and poplar trees intermixed with spined century plants and yellow-flowered Scotch broom, followed us along the road—the road that led to Cuzco.

Cuzco, which the Indians called the "navel of the world," was the capital of an empire which reached from Colombia to Chile, from the Pacific to the jungles, an empire ruled by a hereditary Inca with powers checked only by the influence of custom. It was one of the great barbaric cultures and the effect of its five centuries rule in South America was so far-reaching that its influence will remain forever.

From this city, which had 100,000 families in residence, poured out the orders that governed it; into it poured all the tribute of empire; gold and silver from its mines; from the upper Amazon (close by) rare woods, bird skins, coca leaves, dyestuffs, cotton; from the highlands, the heavy wools of the alpaca, the silky threads of the vicuna, and all the other food products of the temperate zone.

Here, in state, lived the Inca, surrounded by a ritual as complicated as that of any oriental potentate, and here lived, in miniature, colonies of Indians, all retaining their own native dress. All lands belonged to the Inca.

NEVER OWNED LAND

The Indians used the lands, gathered the usufruct, but never owned land. There was no money here, all taxes were paid in labor and every taxpayer had to perform a certain amount of work annually.

There were enormous public buildings to be erected, fortresses all over the realm, sun temples to construct, palaces for the rulers, public works such as roads, bridges, canalizing of rivers — all this was done without money, with human labor as the monetary standard — and what the Incas accomplished in their five centuries of rule was so tremendous that it defies any simple description.

To govern this gigantic empire that stretched over mountains, jungles and deserts, the Incas consolidated all other roads and converted them into a road system; great stone roads, replete with bridges, way stations, and a courier system which was so efficient that the Incas had a knowledge of almost everything, within hours or days after it had transpired. The empire was divided into four great "suyu" — territorial divisions; the empire was called the "land of the four quarters."

FOUR DIRECTIONS

Out from Cuzco went the roads to these four cardinal directions. All roads, as also in Rome, led to Cuzco.

An Indian could start from Cuzco's main plaza and travel in a direct route to Argentina, by taking another angle of the plaza he could travel straight to Quito, Ecuador, a distance of 1,500 miles. Only now has the world caught up with this efficient road system. Cuzco temporarily will be our base camp while we explore the Inca highway in four directions.

Released Canadians Say More To Follow

BY BILL BOSS

FREEDOM VILLAGE, Korea (CP)—Thirteen, excited Canadian soldiers returned to freedom from Communist prison camps Saturday and said more are coming in a few days.

They were not permitted by the army to tell reporters how many Canadians await repatriation by the Reds in the post-armistice exchange of Korea PW's or to give any names.

Twenty-nine Canadian soldiers are unaccounted for—listed in Canadian army records as prisoners or missing.

At least 11 of the 13 who came out of North Korea at the week end are due to be in Canada by next Saturday. They will be flown to Vancouver by Canadian Pacific Airlines, to go into military hospital for an intensive check-up before proceeding to their homes.

Two others—L.-Cpl. A. A. Deveau of Comeauville, N.S., and Pte. H. H. Brooks of Regina—may not be able to fly that soon. They were taken immediately to Britannia Camp for medical treatment. Deveau's broken right arm was put in a new cast. Pte. Brooks needed some hours' rest before he could see newspaper men.

FAIR CARE

Deveau's arm later will have to be reset, doctors said. He has shell fragments in a leg and has almost lost the sight of an eye which also was hit. But he said the Chinese "looked after me as well as they could."

Except for Deveau and Brooks, Saturday's group appeared in reasonable good health. Their greatest hardship seemed to be too little food last winter.

Second Lieut. Charles Owen, who has a wife and two children in Vancouver where he has lived since 1940, was the first officer released by the Chinese. He said he was kept in solitary confinement for 11 of the 16 weeks he spent as a prisoner in North Korea, the roughest treatment experienced by any Canadian released so far.

TAKEN ON BIRTHDAY

He said he was captured May 3, his 24th birthday, at the peak of a battle between Chinese troops and the Royal Canadian Regiment. One Chinese grenade landed at his feet but "all it did was blow my feet into the air and throw a small fragment into my seat."

(Military censors cut 20 words from Boss' cable. Apparently the deletion was part of his interview with Owen.)

The former resident of Los Angeles, Calif., who said he still is a United States citizen though he plans to stay in the Canadian army, said his first prison cell in North Korea was a room eight feet square with a mud floor and no furnishings but a pile of straw and a flat stone. The rock was his pillow—his "only luxury"—and one night that was taken away.

"I was never so angry before," Owen said.

GOOD NEWS

Release brought good news to four privates of the 1st Battalion, RCR: Elmer McInnis, 20, of Little Bras D'Or, N.S.; Eugene Fields, 21, of Windsor, Ont.; Donald Watson, 23, of Toronto, and Bernard Jewer of New Waterford, N.S.

As they told of their capture last October 23 during a battle on a spur of Little Gibraltar, one of Korea's hottest battlegrounds, they said their buddy, Pte. Charles Peacock of Toronto, had been killed.

They shouted "wonderful," when I told them Peacock had been evacuated safely with a thigh wound and now is believed home in Canada.

Fields, Watson and Jewer said their prison-camp diet last winter was rice, green turnips and potato water.

Ptes. Joseph Allain of Rexton, N.B., and Joseph Bellefeuille of Hull, Que., acknowledged that they signed a Communist petition in June, 1952, petitioning Lord Alexander, British defense minister then visiting Korea, to stop "the imperialist war."

They said their purpose was to let people know they were alive: "We had written letters but hadn't received replies."

While some Allied prisoners freed by the Reds have shown little emotion, four of Saturday's Canadian group kept up a steady flow of banter with reporters and cameramen. Ptes. George Griffiths, 23, of Brighton, Ont., Ken Dawe, 24, of Grand Bend, Ont., James Cranston, 20, of Hamilton, and Don Orson, 23, of Ridgetown, Ont., were the brightest PWs to reach Freedom Village in many days. Their main complaint of prison conditions was the horrible taste of their Red captors' coffee.

CNE To Display Gem Collection

Since "diamonds are a girl's best friend," many of the fair sex will be dazzled by the $15,000,000 collection of gems to be display at the 50th anniversary of the Canadian National Exhibition to be held in Toronto from August 28 to September 12. It will be the largest array of jewelry ever assembled under one roof and it will be part and parcel of the largest outdoor exhibition in the world. Five New York diamond concerns and one Canadian outfit are responsible for the collection, which will include such interesting items as an engagement ring worth $300,000; a tiara once worn by Empress Josephine; a 75-carat unset stone named in honor of the CNE, and various bracelets, brooches, rings and other baubles, seen above, worth $50,000 or so.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Morocco's New Sultan In Palace

RABAT, Morocco (AP)—Mouley Mohammed Ben Arafa, the new sultan of Morocco, arrived in this capital Saturday and moved into his beautiful Moorish palace amid medieval pomp and African ritual.

Crowds lined the wide boulevards between the railroad station and the palace to catch a glimpse of the new sultan but most of the spectators were French. Few Moslems ventured out of their crowded native quarters.

French officials admitted that most of the Moslems are in mourning over the exile of Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef, the nationalist-minded old sultan who is second cousin of the new.

Arafa was welcomed at the palace by Gen. Augustin Guillaume, French resident general, who deposed Youssef and put Arafa on the throne of this northwest African protectorate.

Arafa came in a special train from Marrakech with Thami El Glaoui, pro-French Pasha of Marrakech, who led the Berber chieftains' drive to oust the former sultan.

Nearly all the pashas and caids from southern Morocco who came with the other pashas have been gathering for two days.

French observation planes hovered overhead as the train arrived, but there was no sign of any unrest in the city.

Amateurs Know More

PARIS (Reuters) — In France the rankest amateur knows more about women than Dr. Kinsey, the newspaper Combat contended Saturday. It shrugged off Kinsey's report on the sexual behavior of the human female as "naive."

Recount Set On Mainland

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Recount of some 30,000 votes cast in the New Westminster federal electoral district will start Monday, County Court Judge Harry Sullivan announced Saturday.

Returning officer Albert Beatty said the total vote for the two candidates, including the soldiers' vote, was Hahn 10,758 and Mott 10,725.

Ron Irvine, CCF candidate, collected 9,160 ballots and the Labor-Progressive Party candidate, Leo Brady, 899, on the election-night count.

Mr. Mott's application for recount said 283 ballots were rejected.

Guild Vote Due Today

SEATTLE (UP)—The negotiating committee for some 250 members of the CIO American Newspaper Guild now on strike against the Seattle Times reported Saturday it favored rejection of the newspaper's latest offer.

Guild members were scheduled to vote on the proposal this afternoon.

The company's latest offer would give most employees wage increases ranging from $2 to $4 a week. It also would establish a six-th-year classification for reporters.

Top scale for reporters would be $108 a week, and wages would be retroactive to May 4.

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov gave a full-dress reception Friday night for the Communist East German government delegation visiting Moscow, an official announcement said Saturday. The delegation headed by Premier Otto Grotewohl arrived here Thursday for talks on "outstanding questions."

Rising Tide of Solidarity

Church Leaders Believe World Ranks Tightening

NEW YORK (AP)—Church leaders of many lands believe world Christianity is tightening its ranks.

Among diverse segments of the faith, they say, there is a rising tide of solidarity.

The churches are finding, says the Rt. Rev. Eivind Berggrav, bishop of Oslo, Norway, that to "stay together is essential, even if we can't unite and become an institution."

Occasion for the messages is the fifth anniversary of the World Council of Churches, founded August 23, 1948—five years ago this Sunday.

Since then, said Rev. Akira Ebisawa, general secretary of Japan's National Christian Council, "The Ecumenical Co-Operative Movement has moved to the fore in the Christian community."

"There has been a new consciousness of the world mission of the churches."

Through the council, an estimated 175,000,000 Christians in 161 denominations in 48 nations have forged a program of joint endeavor. It includes Anglicans, Protestants and orthodox churches."

"We are in the early stages of another of the great reformations in the life of the church," said Robert S. Bilheimer, secretary for the council's program in North America.

The Very Rev. J. Hutchison Cockburn, of the Church of Scotland, said in a message from Edinburgh:

"Slowly and tentatively, the churches have come to see what has been often lost sight of in quarrels and competition with one another—that God in Jesus Christ created the church 'one.'"

Step by step, during its first five years, the world council has expanded its program, exploring denominational misunderstandings, guiding mission efforts, supplying relief funds, registering publicly its convictions.

Said Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, United Lutheran president and vice-chairman of the U.S. conference for the world council:

"The international Christian movement has done more to link men of many nations, reconcile old enemies and lay a solid foundation for peace and brotherhood since the Second World War than any other force on earth."

Revenue Minister Carries On Alone

OTTAWA (CP)—A physician and surgeon turned politician is acting prime minister of Canada, minister of national revenue and acting minister of every other department of government.

Revenue Minister McCann finds himself in this unusual position because he's the only member of the federal cabinet at his desk in the capital. His colleagues, including Prime Minister St. Laurent, are on holidays and resting from the hectic election campaign.

A spokesman in Mr. McCann's office said the acting prime minister "is a pretty busy man." However, he said Mr. McCann can reach Mr. St. Laurent or other members of the cabinet almost immediately in event of an emergency.

Fine Instrument Spare-Time Hobby

New Zealand-Made Violin Like Stradivarius

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—Alan Loveday, noted violinist, has found a violin in New Zealand that he thinks will be as good as a Stradivarius in a few years. It was produced by an architect who makes violins as a hobby.

Loveday's own Stradivarius cost nearly $9,000, his new instrument $220. For some time, he had been seeking an instrument of fine quality so that he would not have to use his "Strad" constantly. As soon as he ran the bow over the strings of a violin shown him by R. R. G. Beatson of Auckland, he knew he had found what he wanted.

"I have always been interested in present-day violins," he said. "This one is by far the best I have seen. A unique feature is that it contains New Zealand woods. The instrument is not particularly outstanding in appearance, but it has an excellent tone.

"In the month I have had it I have played it for only a few hours, but the newness is already wearing off. The tone improves each time I take the instrument out of its case. It seems amazing, but I am certain that within a few years this violin will equal the Stradivarius."

Loveday said that until its true mellow tone began to come out he would not use the new instrument for broadcasting, but would soon begin to use it at concert performances.

Beatson began making violins some years ago in his spare time. He started with several initial advantages—a knowledge of timber, a well-equipped workshop, and skill at woodworking.

Because imported woods were not available in the immediate post-war years, Beatson made an exhaustive acoustic study of locally grown timber. Mill foremen became used to seeing him spending whole days picking up offcuts and tapping them.

Finally he selected Canadian spruce for the fronts of the instruments and mangeau for the backs. Mangeau he found a difficult timber to work successfully, but it paid off in results.

He thinks the old masters gave some sort of treatment to the timber to finish off the seasoning process, and he has developed a method of his own. His work is careful and exacting and he turns out only two violins a year.

Asked whether he had also developed skill at playing his violins, he said: "I make a noise, and that's all. Making them is my hobby and it has its own satisfactions."

Doctor, Nurses Found on Lake

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—A doctor and four nurses, missing in a speed boat in Lake Ontario since Friday night, were found safe Saturday near the mainland.

They were spotted by Mrs. E. T. Driver of Collin's Bay who was out in her own boat.

The party—Dr. Maurice James, a surgeon at Hotel Dieu hospital here, and nurses Ann Deegan, Kay Devine, K. McAuley and Norma McEwen—were reported to have spent the night in an abandoned cottage on one of the Brothers Islands. They had been swimming and when they were ready to return home, the motor of their boat wouldn't start.

Earth Tremors Shake Pereira

BOGOTA (AP)—Strong earth tremors shook the region of Pereira about 150 miles west of Bogota Friday, but reports from that city said there apparently was no damage.

Life in Retirement Given New Interest

LONDON, ONT. (CP)—Helping retired persons to lead full, interesting lives is the purpose of a project under way here.

M. J. Best, president of the London District Life Underwriters' Association, says the association-sponsored project grew from a fishing trip last June for a group of 30 retired men.

Such persons in many cases are suddenly cut off from their life interests and associations, Mr. Best said. For a time, they amuse themselves doing things they have wanted to do all their lives, then they find time begins to hang heavily on their hands.

"Unless we have acquired hobbies or other strong interests during our working years, adjusting to retired living is extremely difficult. Thousands of retired men die each year, largely because of boredom."

Working through employers, the association is planning to get in touch with retired men and those soon to retire in the city. They are enlisting hobbyists, teachers, clubs and other interested individuals in planning interests and programs.

Interviews have already started. After finding out men's interests, they are put in touch with hobbyists and others who have offered to help in the work.

Mr. Best said his association recognizes this as a national problem and hopes that other interested groups will adopt a similar program in their communities.

A CHILD'S FAITH
To a youngster, it seems that mother and dad are able to do almost anything. They can repair a broken toy, heal a cut finger, or brush away fear. A child's faith is one of the treasured rewards of parenthood. The feeling of relief and security inspired by the presence of the family physician as he ministers to a loved one is much the same. The physician's mere presence in time of emergency instills confidence, removes fear. The family physician is indeed a servant of mankind.

The Art of Conversation

OLDER countries in the world have preserved to a better degree than the new the essentially broadening art of conversation. Ideas are the most potent factors in human development, and ideas are the stock in trade of conversation when it is properly conducted. The process of howling somebody down, so prevalent during the recent election and so persistent in its aftermath, is not a civilizing force but quite to the contrary. No conversation could survive under that principle, which is more akin to the tantrums of childhood with their hour-long assertions of "I did," "You didn't," reiterated endlessly.

To converse, on the other hand, emphasizes the listening faculty quite as much as the speaking one, and means in fact to take turn and turn about in the exchange of ideas. This is what a child up to a certain age is not mature enough to do. Grown-ups, however, are supposed to be mature, and it is a measurement of the mature individual to be able to carry and respond to an orderly conversation, one in which thought is the prevailing contribution. Such exchanges are best when they take place on an impersonal plane, where the mind is free to range without offense to any auditor. Older countries of the world with large static populations in relatively small areas have developed the art best. They had to, to keep the peace.

While no doubt some of it is a reaction from British Columbia's double election campaign and therefore need not be considered normal, there is still too ready a disposition to cry down another's opinion. "It is!" "It isn't!" That is the old game of the children, and without their excuse of inexperience. There will be small genuine progress for mankind if we cannot abide to hear another person's views. There can be no real exchange of minds unless ideas can be talked out, pro and con, in a reasonable and amicable fashion. That is the primary function of conversation. It is an art which many in the new world have not mastered yet. They are ready to talk, but none too ready to listen.

Back to Soldiering

FATE usually has an ace of irony up her sleeve and there is a touch of this element in word from Korea that now the 25th Brigade will have to do some real soldiering. The implication would be that in the battle line the troops haven't been soldiering, were it not that the military lexicon has a language of its own. What is actually meant is that a long spell of barrack-square soldiering may lie ahead of them.

Soldiers do parade ground drill to fit them for active front-line service, where often enough little or no opportunity to stretch their legs occurs. It is anomalous but true that the things commonly associated with soldiers—drilling, marching, physical exercise—seldom have a place in the battle areas, certainly not in front-line duty. As soldiers know only too well a spell out of the line invariably means a return to spit-and-polish and the humdrum routine of ordinary military life. Many a soldier in what is called a "rest" area, in fact, longs to get back to the front line in order to enjoy a rest, much preferring that to drilling.

The period ahead of the 25th Brigade, now that its battle ordeal is over at least temporarily, is in its own way just as difficult as the period behind it. Lacking the excitement of war that even if hazardous sustains interest and morale, occupational duty calls for a different set of values. Boredom is not easy to combat and it takes great pride of self and unit to maintain discipline and a high standard of behaviour.

One does not doubt that the 25th Brigade can orient itself to peace as it did so creditably to war, even though there will be some heartburning among the troops as they engage in exercises designed to keep them fighting fit. Coming after the real thing these reflect the irony mentioned above. In the same sense that the word soldiering is used it could be said that peace is tougher on soldiers than is war, a sentiment likely to find open expression as the 25th Brigade scampers about the Korean countryside in mobile exercises.

The First Russet

NATURE keeps its own calendar, with its changing seasons. Autumn is not far away when the horse chestnuts swell in their prickly green cases, and the first russet leaves lie wind-broken beneath the oak. The bracken at the roadside is tinted. The leaves of the mountain ash already are blanching, while their berries grow brick red. In garden and in orchard swells the harvest of the year with its colors, its fragrances and its rich, ripe store. One would not need a calendar to proclaim the coming autumn. Every leaf, every twig, every blade of grass and every star in the sky tells the same story.

Time was, and in the country is, when autumn with its harvest was the consummation of the year. It was then that the earth "gave increase," and man stored away that which was useful for the long winter to come. Urbanization has not changed that pattern, but in the cities it has disguised it. Stone walls know no blossomings; dusty alleys have no change save that from dust to mud. Yet the gardens preserve something of the harvest with its warm essences, and the boulevards mark well the passing August days. One reaches out for summer, and all too soon it is gone. This, points the chestnut tree, now is autumn coming up.

Russet is autumn's house flag, its distinguishing mark. Its first faint tinges are in evidence. Soon it will mark a countryside, line every highway and spread deep into the distant hills. The golds, the scarlets the browns of autumn will have their day, but in the end it will be russet that tints the mantle that autumn will wear. One can see it now in the first leaves fallen, in the first hulls of the acorns loosed on the ground. A harvest is being made ready to man's gathering; but a year is dying too in the bitter-sweet of the season, so like the bitter-sweet of life.

EARLY ISLAND VOYAGE

Sir—Referring to "Old Homes and Families," which appeared in the Sunday Colonist, and which I always read with enjoyment, you print a photo of Master Herbert Kent—at that time 17 years old—and who was a passenger on the steamer Princess Louise around Vancouver Island, and who kept a diary of the trip to which you made reference. I am wondering if you would like to know what the cost of that trip was.

The passenger list was limited to 40, and the price of that long-to-be-remembered trip of 10 days was $25 each. Can you imagine hiring a boat now-a-days for such a trip for $1,000? I fancy that the only living passengers who enjoyed that tour of the Island, are Mr. Arthur D. Crease, QC, and myself.

THE SPCA SHELTER

Sir,—Mr. Maggs' recommendation to Victorians to visit the SPCA shelter at 111 Wilson Street on Wednesday afternoon, August 26, should be widely accepted. As Mr. Maggs stated, visitors will find it well worthwhile.

The SPCA service is inclined to be taken for granted, and many people do not appreciate that it is not subsidized in any way, that the shelter is the only one of its kind in British Columbia, and that most of the general work is done by volunteers.

A visit to the shelter on Wednesday's open house will be interesting and informative about this worthwhile service to which one automatically turns when the need arises.

ELECTION RESULTS

Sir,—Typical of so many political pundits, Mr. James K. Nesbitt falls into the trap of analysing election returns on the sole basis of number of seats won.

In his August 16 review of the British Columbia situation, he points to the gain of four B.C. seats for the CCF in recent federal elections and asks "How can this be anything but a gain for CCF and SC, a loss for the old parties?" He goes on to say "the trend to Social Credit and CCF, so strong in the provincial election last June . . . was continued to a very great extent in the federal election in B.C."

On two points at least, he is incorrect. The CCF gained no additional support in the recent provincial election, and the CCF actually lost support in the recent federal election. From preliminary provincial election returns, the CCF obtained 30.78% of the total popular vote in 1952 and about 30.7% in 1953. This percentage is down from 1949 figures of 35% and the 1945 figures of 38.5%.

Canadian Press reports of the federal election showed that in B.C. the CCF obtained about 26.5% of the total popular vote compared with 31.5% in the federal election of 1949. Peculiarities of voting systems, disparities in numbers of electors per riding or election district, the rise of several strong parties to split the vote, and the voters' actions make for unusual results, riding by riding.

But one fact is sure, the Socialist idea is steadily losing ground in British Columbia and this trend has been amply demonstrated by proportions of popular vote in recent elections.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

SAID a friend to me last week, "How did you do about hotel accommodation in London?" wherein hangs a tale. Its telling filled him with glee, albeit at the time of the happenings concerned I found nothing to laugh at.

But judge for yourself, presuming you not to be tired of my overseas adventures.

Let me set the scene.

You must know that for reasons which do not matter here I traveled up to London from Portsmouth on the day of my arrival—alone. I therefore landed in Waterloo station dependent solely on my own morale.

Before I left Victoria I had arranged, I thought, with a Coronation committee secretary in London to book me a room. So when I got off the train I went confidently to a public telephone, dropped in my three pennies one after the other according to instructions, and called the gentleman in question.

* * *

To my dismay he said he hadn't secured a reservation. To my astonishment he seemed quite unconcerned. To cap the situation he offered me the name of another committee I might contact—the next day!

I daresay he had been frightfully busy, however, so I thanked him just the same and hung up.

But I was rather flabbergasted. It was 8.30 p.m., I was in a strange city, it was the Coronation eve period, and probably every hotel was filled to the roof.

What should I do? I had visions of sleeping on the Embankment and then being hauled off to the Old Bailey. And Scotland Yard, I remembered, had two pictures of me in their possession, convict-passport style well calculated to gain me easy passport to a cell.

* * *

I summoned all my Canadian resource. The telephone directory! Of course.

I opened it and lo and behold, the first entry that caught my eye read "Hotels Executive Offices, British Railways." Perfect. The very thing. The administrative headquarters of British railway hotels.

"Where are you now?" asked the voice. "At Waterloo station," I replied. "Well then, go to the Waterloo," said the voice.

Unthinkingly I asked "Where is that?" and drew a laugh that abashed me as the voice said, "Why, where you are, of course."

"Oh," returned I, mortified but relieved, "thank you very much."

I stepped out of the telephone booth and looked around. Railway hotels usually have an entrance in the station. I couldn't see any, whereupon I walked outside and accosted a taxi driver.

"Where is the Waterloo hotel, please?" I asked. He looked at me as though I had asked him to name the capital of Patagonia. "Never heard of it," he answered.

* * *

That's funny, I thought, but he beckoned me and we crossed the street together towards another taxi driver.

"This gentleman is looking for the Waterloo Hotel," he said to his fellow taximan. "There isn't any such hotel," was the reply.

"But there must be," I protested. "A chap at the railway executive office just told me it was right here."

"Yes," said the second driver, "it used to be but it hasn't been here for years."

I gazed at him, unbelievingly, but he smiled and shook his head.

If I was flabbergasted before I was now thunderstruck. For a moment I felt like phoning the railway executive and having the last laugh, but that would be but a Pyrrhic victory and it wouldn't get me a room.

What do I do now?

Back I went to the telephone directory. I flipped the pages, trying hard to bolster my fading morale. Hotels? Yes, there was a long list of them. I crossed to a milk bar, secured some more pennies, and started dialing. One, two, three, four hotels. Sorry, no vacancies.

Then I had a brilliant idea.

* * *

But I have no space to continue the story. Stay with me and I'll relate the sequel on Tuesday.

International Commentary . . .

The Future of Nigeria

By DONAL McCORMICK

North American Newspaper Alliance

LONDON — Picturesquely garbed leaders of Nigeria, Britain's largest colony, are trying to thrash out an agreed plan for the future of their country with Britain's colonial secretary, Oliver Lyttelton, and his advisers in London.

In a few weeks' time the picture of Nigeria's future may be a little clearer. At the moment it is vague and complicated. For here is not the usual colonial picture of one side demanding self-government and the other side saying "not yet," but of half Nigeria wanting the British government to grant self-government within three years, and the other half saying: "Postpone a decision. We are not ready for it."

Look at a map of Nigeria and you see a mosaic—a mosaic of man-made boundaries which enclose a population of 30,000,000 and still growing fast. Following the famous "scramble for Africa" in the early '80s there came the Berlin conference.

In considering the claims put forward by various governments, the Berlin conference took little account of natural tribal groupings. Lines were drawn on a map and sometimes a territorial boundary went through the middle of a tiny village.

Nigeria consists of several hundred tribal groupings, but, generally speaking, they all belong to one or other of a few main tribes. In the north are the Fulanis, Hausa and Kanuris, and, though it is an inaccurate expression, they are generally referred to as the Hausa people.

It is in the north of Nigeria that Britain first established her traditions of indirect rule—i.e., rule through the medium of the local chieftains. For years it has worked well.

But the north, with its conservative-minded chieftains and its own cherished traditions, has lagged behind the south and the east in political development. The north is typified by Kano, the mud-walled city where two worlds meet—the Kano, which is the ancient market place of Northwest Africa and the camel "trains" from the desert and the Kano of the international airport.

It is in the south and east that you will find political fervor and demand for independence—a demand of which the north is suspicious. The north will not be hurried. The south, under the impetus of fiery, dynamic British-educated barrister and chain newspaper proprietor, Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe ("Zik"), says: "The Gold Coast are getting independence. Why not us?"

For years he was the only real political leader in Nigeria. He had a setback when, in the 1951 elections, his national committee of Nigeria and the Cameroons was beaten by the Action Group. Some said that "Zik" was "finished." But in the crisis of March last year, when the Action Party demanded independence by 1956, Dr. Azikiwe made a comeback by supporting the Action Group against the north.

And "Zik's" ambition is to be the first prime minister of Nigeria, with the trust territory of the Cameroons thrown in.

Britain has a very great stake in Nigeria, both strategically and economically. Nigeria provides one of the biggest markets for textile goods—a market which we are in danger of pricing ourselves out against keen competition from Japan and Germany.

If we are to hold this market, a sound political basis for the new Nigeria is necessary.

Slowly, but surely, West Africa, as a whole, is moving toward complete independence within, it is hoped, the Commonwealth. The Gold Coast has paved the way, but any mistakes with regard to Nigeria could upset the present friendly relations between Whitehall and the colonies in West Africa.

U.S. Prestige Abroad

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

ROME—Not only in Italy but everywhere else a new American administration adds an element of uncertainty to the international situation. If, as in Italy, critics have accused us of trying to influence the recent elections, they forget the passionately partisan interest with which Europeans followed the American elections and the disappointment, publicly expressed in the European press at Stevenson's defeat. The nature of American-European relations is such that we are inexorably tangled up in each other's political affairs.

But the first six months of the Eisenhower administration added to the uncertainty as it became clear that members of the President's own party are his worst problem in Congress, that he is dependent for support of his most cherished policies on Democratic votes, and that his position vis-a-vis Congress is weak. Any sign of administrative weakness in Washington adversely affects the prestige of America abroad.

That is the real significance of Senator McCarthy's attempted purges of the foreign service. They register, for all the world to see, a vote of no confidence in the loyalty and capacity of the Eisenhower-Dulles administration from a section of the President's own party. The effect on the morale of the foreign service itself is, of course, lamentable, and it leads Europeans to inquire who really governs America.

Anti-American forces, seeing this fear and embarrassment, blow up McCarthy into an international bogey to obliterate the features of all other American leaders.

Concomitantly, the economy moves of the administration were taken wholesale and in general without regard to specific situations. They required the sudden reduction of embassy, consulate and U.S.I.S. staffs. The ambassador to Rome, for instance, who arrived just before highly critical elections, has had to dismiss 30 per cent of chancery employees, thus beginning her work in a generally unhappy atmosphere. Where these were Italians, the political effect of dismissal slips in a country where unemployment is endemic could not be favorable to America.

Added to this was the cutback in American aid, which also immediately preceded and accompanied the Italian election campaign.

Insofar as American policies may have contributed to the defeat of Premier De Gasperi, these were, I believe, the chief factors.

Victoria in Beard and Crinoline

BY G. E. MORTIMORE

DURING three years of office, Governor A. E. Kennedy of Vancouver Island had never been north of Nanaimo nor west of Leech River. Now at last, The Daily British Colonist reported in rather patronizing fashion, he had circled the Island and learned how the other half—or the other three-quarters—lived.

"His Excellency . . . must feel how limited was his previous knowledge of the Island and those who inhabit it," The Colonist observed.

In the gunboat HMS Scout, he circumnavigated the Island in ten days, leaving Esquimalt at 10 a.m., Aug. 8, and dropping anchor there again at 4 p.m., Aug. 18.

Indians were friendly all the way. At Ouchucklesit (as it was then spelled) the Indians accepted gifts of blankets and biscuits, and "asked eagerly for some white man to live among them in the capacity of Indian agent. This indeed appears to be much needed everywhere, for the Indians want someone whom they can respect and look up to and who will protect them and represent their grievances . . ."

". . . His Excellency landed at Village Island and visited the fishing establishment of Messrs. Sproat and Co. They have a quantity of most excellent cod, which they salt down. . . . Their little schooner Codfish takes them to Victoria." Up Clayoquot Sound they found the Ahousat Indians who had been punished by a bombardment from the gunboat Sutlej. Chief Cupcha showed the scars, of severe wounds.

In Quatsino Sound they met the schooner Kate, Captain Waller, trading for salmon. The settlers at Comox "spoke cheerfully of their prospects," but "complained much of the want of a road from the settlement to the bay, and . . . of the difficulty of getting rid of their produce, except at a loss." A trail to the Comox coal mines was to be started the following week.

"Many of the settlers are single men, and complained bitterly of not being able to obtain wives, as bachelor life is not conducive to comfort. A very pretty meandering stream passes through the settlement, abounding with trout. The officers from the ship caught some magnificent fish."

"The town of Nanaimo has wonderfully improved during the last three years. Its progress is slow but sure." Arriving at Cowichan Bay on Sunday, "His Excellency landed and attended divine service at the parsonage. There were 39 people present; sometime there are as many as 60. After service, His Excellency rode around and visited various settlers. Some magnificent oats were seen at the farm of Mr. Alexander; he expected they would yield at least 80 bushels to the acre . . ."

On Salt Spring the governor landed and walked to Mr. Booth's farm. Arrived back at Esquimalt, the ship had logged 795 miles.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

MOST of us can hardly remember what kind of a day yesterday was. It takes a deliberate effort of the mind to grope back in memory 24 hours and picture what it was like yesterday morning. If yesterday was a very bad day, with rain and storm or perhaps intense heat, we can recall it clearly. But the day before yesterday we are highly liable to confuse with a day or two before.

There are people among us, however, who are weather-wise. They have formed the habit of noticing and remembering the weather, a habit of mind like that of remembering the date of the Norman Conquest, or being able to tell how many days there are in September without having to recite to themselves the little poem.

Weather-wise people have a lot of fun, and are uncannily correct in their estimates of what tomorrow is going to be like. At my summer place there is a settler who really ought to be employed by the Dominion meteorological service, if it were not for the fact that his predictions of weather refer strictly to our immediate vicinity. The big problem of the official weather forecasters is that they have to prophesy over so wide an area. But if you want to know what it is going to do tomorrow, right around here, you can ask this old settler, and so far he has never been proven wrong. His gift is based entirely on the fact that he makes a hobby of remembering yesterday, the day before yesterday, the day before that, and so on back for even a whole month.

Because he has to travel fairly open water in an open boat, because he has to paint cottages and engage in other jobs dependent upon weather, he has all his life studied the clouds, the visibility, the wind direction and force, and several other factors.

"You make the mistake," he told me, "of thinking the weather is lawless, that it is accidental, that any old thing can happen. As a matter of fact, weather moves in a very small pattern and forms only three or four combinations. Once you get onto them, and remember the pattern of the past few days, you can't go far wrong."

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Under ordinary circumstances, sickness of the body is not a mark of infamy or disgrace. Indeed, one of the marks of a civilized generation is the amount of care and compassion which is offered to those who are ill. Hospitals, in a real sense, are significant milestones in man's ascent from the egoism which marks the savage.

Hospital visiting is not merely the professional duty of the medical doctor or the pastoral privilege of the parson. It is also a measure of love and affection displayed by family and friends.

In a Christian community, it is the fulfilment of brotherly obligation laid upon the Christian disciple by Christ Himself.

But if it is somewhat of a social success to have had an "operation," why is it that society looks with such prejudice and disfavor upon those whose sickness embraces the mind?

To be sure, illnesses of the mind tend to produce actions and attitudes which offend the canons of good taste and of ordered society, but I have visited a hospital room when the sickness of an organ has filled the air with a fetid stench. Must the patient be blamed for this?

* * *

Mind-sickness is just as real as a sprained ankle.

Some people argue that just because the mind cannot be seen or touched or measured or weighed, then such a component of the human being cannot exist.

But Drs. Strecker and Appel of the department of psychiatry in the University of Pennsylvania give to the mind the quality of spirituality. Then they go on to say that this "does not mean the mind is not actual and real."

When we think of the mind of another human being, we think of the thoughts, the feelings, the impulses, the ideals and the will which animate the body.

Think of someone who is dear to you. Do you call to mind his toes, his fingers, his nose, his heart or his lungs? Not at all. You are dealing here with a recollection of the personality of the individual. This personality is a concept. You can't put it in a bottle, but you can (if you must) compile a record of that person's behavior with reference to the mental factors involved.

If that personality is out of line with the generally accepted standards of intelligent behavior, then the psychiatrist comes into the picture just as legitimately as the dentist comes into your mouth to correct an aching tooth.

The mind cannot function apart from those pathways through which it works — the nerves, the spinal cord and the brain.

* * *

Now, on Wednesday last, in company with the Hon. W. D. Black, the provincial secretary, and Captain Pennington, the deputy minister, I paid my first visit to the Crease Clinic and the main mental hospital at Essondale.

Some people will be inclined to think that this would be something of a distasteful experience. Nothing could be further from the truth. But one thing had to be done. All preconceived notions and prejudices about a mental institution had to be left in Victoria.

There are, I suppose, examples of so-called "snake pits" in existence, but what I saw on Wednesday makes me sure that they do not come under the administration of the provincial secretary of British Columbia.

Dr. Gee and his associates are aware that conditions are not always ideal. There are antiquated buildings as well as the fine facilities of the clinic. There is over-crowding in some sections. But the remedy for this situation lies in the hands of the people of British Columbia and their representatives in James Bay.

For my money, Mr. Black's portfolio embraces one of the most important and most imperfectly appreciated departments of modern government, and I hope to be able to have more to say about this in the future.

Numbers of Blue Grouse Increased with Logging

—From an original drawing by F. L. Beebe.

BY C. J. GUIGUET
Provincial Museum Biologist

Blue grouse have been a subject of controversy for many years among those interested in the speciation of birds, for two different appearing groups are present in western North America. In British Columbia we have both groups, and some claim each should have full specific status, each with one or more subspecies; while others maintain that only one species, made up of four subspecies, occurs.

The average person has little interest in such controversy and a blue grouse is a blue grouse wherever encountered. However, the bird of the Coast and coastal islands differs markedly from those of the Interior and so we shall treat these groups separately, dealing here with the sooty blue grouse which occurs west of the Cascades.

The sooty blue grouse occupies the Mainland coast, coastal islands, and Vancouver Island, where it is resident the year round. The majority of these birds spend the winter in coniferous forests on higher ridges, descending in March and April to the natural clearings and man-made slashes where they nest.

LOGGERS HELP

With the onset of heavy logging operations resulting in vast areas of excellent breeding range, it was inevitable that the blue grouse population should increase, as indeed it did. Today there are far more blue grouse in coastal British Columbia than there were when only the natural clearings were available for nesting. Unlike most wildlife species, the blue grouse has no winter range problem, for after breeding and raising the young these birds migrate up, feeding throughout the winter upon an inexhaustible and readily available supply of coniferous buds and needles.

In the Douglas fir belt, they appear to favor that tree, while further north Sitka spruce is utilized. In the summer months, berries, seeds, young fir needles, buds and various insects are eaten. When the salal berries ripen they comprise a major item in the food of this species.

UNIQUE CALL

During March and April the slash resounds with the unique ventriloquistic call of the cock birds as they court the hens. This hooting is done from a tree or from the ground and can be heard for miles when conditions are right.

From six to 10 (usually seven or eight) buffy, brown-speckled eggs are laid in a nest well constructed of ferns and twigs and lined with ferns, mosses, dry leaves and feathers. The nests are situated on the ground, usually at the base of a stump, near a fallen log or under a tree.

Young are precocial, leaving the nest to follow the hen shortly after hatching. In the early part of the season large broods are often seen, but later on from two to four chicks is more usual, the others having succumbed to predation, parasitical worms, and other diseases to which these birds are subject.

In July the cock birds migrate up the hills, leaving the hens and their broods on the slash where they remain for varying lengths of time. Some years they move up early, often before the legal shooting season opens, other years they remain longer and a good harvest is taken. The factors controlling this movement are not clearly understood, but it seems that weather conditions are responsible in part.

There is little need to describe the blue grouse here. The illustration shows a cock bird with large air sacs distended on the neck; with tail spread to show the rounded tail feathers; and with the grey terminal band prominently displayed. These points are diagnostic in separating the sooty grouse group from the dusky birds found east of the Cascades. The hen here depicted below the cock is a mottled grey and brown. The tail band is present however, and serves in identification.

On the Queen Charlotte Islands we find a blue grouse of this group which is characterized, in the hens chiefly, by a much redder hue. These are known as Sitka blue grouse, but they are very closely related to the sooty grouse of the Mainland coast and islands. Next week we shall discuss the dusky grouse of the Interior, and the three subspecies which make up that group.

Record Ocean Plunge Planned By Professor Auguste Picard

BY PETER BLOXHAM

LONDON (NANA) — Prof. Auguste Piccard soon will seek to raise—perhaps lower is a better word—the record of two French naval officers who recently dived to the greatest depth ever reached by man. It will be a big moment for Piccard, the shy, odd-looking Belgian scientist with a penchant for vertical travel.

The French naval officers descended in a bathyscaphe, the diving device invented by Piccard, to a depth of 2,100 meters (6,889 feet) off Toulon. Previously the two officers, Lieutenant-Commander Houet and Engineer Will, went down 1,550 meters (5,086 feet).

Twenty-two years ago Piccard made the world gasp by soaring 10 miles upward in a balloon. Now, with his 31-year-old son, Jacques, he hopes to plunge two miles downward into the unexplored depths on the maiden voyage of their new, secretly designed bathyscaphe.

What do the Frenchmen and the professor seek in these perilous bids for new depth records? In the glow of powerful lamps they will see, perhaps, great underwater forests and strange, luminous creatures that prowl only at these fabulous pressures; others that walk blind across the ooze on stiltlike legs.

They may meet giant squids, with limbs long enough to clutch their odd crafts. They may meet "big eye," a creature with an eye five times the size of the rest of its body to gather what dim light it can in the quest for food.

Sea serpents? After the scientific bombshell of the coelacanth that exploded last year, who can say what weird creature may not be lurking there?

Conditions in the great depths have remained unchanged since the age of fishes, 300,000,000 years ago. Many more of the odd shapes scientists have found embedded in rocks as fossilized remains still may roam the extreme depths.

Piccard's craft is something like an underwater balloon. Instead of a gas bag, a large cylindrical tank, about 30 feet long, holds 25,000 gallons of gasoline and 10 tons of steel shot.

Beneath this cylinder is suspended a 10-ton steel globe, which holds the two-man crew and scientific instruments.

The gasoline, lighter than water, gives buoyancy. When it is released and water flows into its place, the bathyscaphe will sink at a controlled pace. When Piccard wishes to ascend, the steel shot held in place by electromagnets is released.

For the dive the professor will have no link with the surface. Should things go wrong his craft cannot be hauled back by cable. But the professor is sure they won't go wrong.

He is sure, though in 1948 he had to abandon a projected similar dive in an earlier version of the craft. Perhaps his confidence is shown in the fact that he has fitted his new craft with an engine, so that when he reaches the sea bed he will be able to explore it horizontally.

As the professor and his son submerge, the green water will at first seem disappointingly empty of life. There will be only floating fragments of seaweed.

Four hundred feet down, they will still be able to read a newspaper by the pale rays of sunlight filtering through the water.

As the depth of water develops, a force of thousands of [illegible] will be pressing against the sphere's thick walls. Should a joint crack, the sphere would be squashed like a tomato under a steam hammer.

Professor Piccard hopes to open up a vista that will solve many problems. We shall know more, if he succeeds, about fauna and sea growths; how they vary in different pressure layers, in size and destiny; what sort of fish they are that never come within range of line or trawl.

Salesmen in Demand

Increase During Week In Job Applications

An increased number of applications for employment was noted for the week ending Friday, the National Employment Service reported, offsetting the number of placements made in the same week.

The only outstanding demand for men is for commission salesmen in lines from household appliances to life insurance. There is no current demand for carpenters; however, there is no sign of slackening in the trade at the present.

Vacancies for skilled tradesmen include those in the plumbing, electrical draughting, sheet metal trades.

LITTLE CHANGE

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Under ordinary circumstances, sickness of the body is not a mark of infamy or disgrace. Indeed, one of the marks of a civilized generation is the amount of care and compassion which is offered to those who are ill. Hospitals, in a real sense, are significant milestones in man's ascent from the egoism which marks the savage.

Hospital visiting is not merely the professional duty of the medical doctor or the pastoral privilege of the parson. It is also a measure of love and affection displayed by family and friends.

In a Christian community, it is the fulfilment of brotherly obligation laid upon the Christian disciple by Christ Himself.

But if it is somewhat of a social success to have had an "operation," why is it that society looks with such prejudice and disfavor upon those whose sickness embraces the mind?

To be sure, illnesses of the mind tend to produce actions and attitudes which offend the canons of good taste and of ordered society, but I have visited a hospital room when the sickness of an organ has filled the air with a fetid stench. Must the patient be blamed for this?

* * *

Mind-sickness is just as real as a sprained ankle.

Some people argue that just because the mind cannot be seen or touched or measured or weighed, then such a component of the human being cannot exist.

But Drs. Strecker and Appel of the department of psychiatry in the University of Pennsylvania give to the mind the quality of spirituality. Then they go on to say that this "does not mean the mind is not actual and real."

When we think of the mind of another human being, we think of the thoughts, the feelings, the impulses, the ideals and the will which animate the body.

Think of someone who is dear to you. Do you call to mind his toes, his fingers, his nose, his heart or his lungs? Not at all. You are dealing here with a recollection of the personality of the individual. This personality is a concept. You can't put it in a bottle, but you can (if you must) compile a record of that person's behavior with reference to the mental factors involved.

If that personality is out of line with the generally accepted standards of intelligent behavior, then the psychiatrist comes into the picture just as legitimately as the dentist comes into your mouth to correct an aching tooth.

The mind cannot function apart from those pathways through which it works — the nerves, the spinal cord and the brain.

* * *

Now, on Wednesday last, in company with the Hon. W. D. Black, the provincial secretary, and Captain Pennington, the deputy minister, I paid my first visit to the Crease Clinic and the main mental hospital at Essondale.

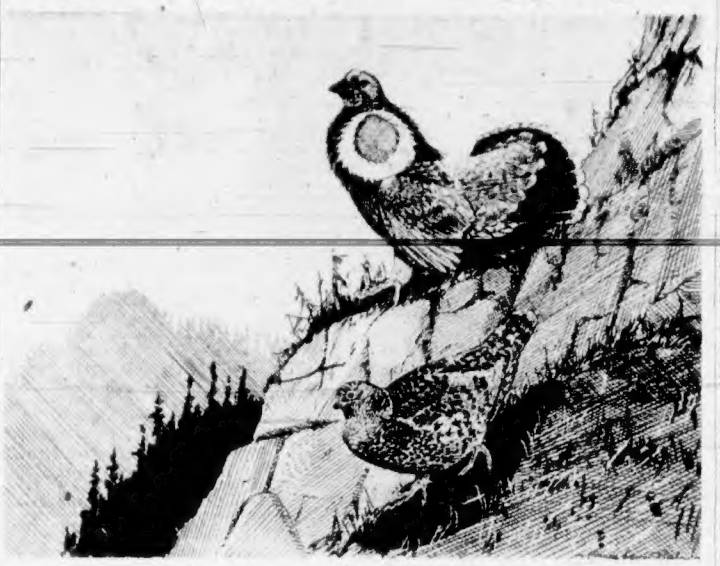

Some people will be inclined to think that this would be something of a distasteful experience. Nothing could be further from the truth. But one thing had to be done. All preconceived notions and prejudices about a mental institution had to be left in Victoria.

There are, I suppose, examples of so-called "snake pits" in existence, but what I saw on Wednesday makes me sure that they do not come under the administration of the provincial secretary of British Columbia.

Dr. Geer and his associates are aware that conditions are not always ideal. There are antiquated buildings as well as the fine facilities of the clinic. There is over-crowding in some sections. But the remedy for this situation lies in the hands of the people of British Columbia and their representatives in James Bay.

For my money, Mr. Black's portfolio embraces one of the most important and most imperfectly appreciated departments of modern government, and I hope to be able to have more to say about this in the future.

Numbers of Blue Grouse Increased with Logging

BY C. J. GUIGUET
Provincial Museum Biologist

Blue grouse have been a subject of controversy for many years among those interested in the speciation of birds, for two different appearing groups are present in western North America. In British Columbia we have both groups, and some claim each should have full specific status, each with one or more subspecies; while others maintain that only one species, made up of four subspecies, occurs.

The average person has little interest in such controversy and a blue grouse is a blue grouse wherever encountered. However, the bird of the Coast and coastal islands differs markedly from those of the Interior and so we shall treat these groups separately, dealing here with the sooty blue grouse which occurs west of the Cascades.

The sooty blue grouse occupies the Mainland coast, coastal islands, and Vancouver Island, where it is resident the year round. The majority of these birds spend the winter in coniferous forests on higher ridges, descending in March and April to the natural clearings and man-made slashes where they nest.

LOGGERS HELP

With the onset of heavy logging operations resulting in vast areas of excellent breeding range, it was inevitable that the blue grouse population should increase, as indeed it did. Today there are far more blue grouse in coastal British Columbia than there were when only the natural clearings were available for nesting. Unlike most wildlife species, the blue grouse has no winter range problem, for after breeding and raising the young these birds migrate up, feeding throughout the winter upon an inexhaustible and readily available supply of coniferous buds and needles.

In the Douglas fir belt, they appear to favor that tree, while further north Sitka spruce is utilized. In the summer months berries, seeds, young fir needles, buds and various insects are eaten. When the salal berries ripen they comprise a major item in the food of this species.

UNIQUE CALL

During March and April the slash resounds with the unique ventriloquistic call of the cock birds as they court the hens. This hooting is done from a tree or from the ground and can be heard for miles when conditions are right.

From six to 10 (usually seven or eight) buffy, brown-speckled eggs are laid in a nest well constructed of ferns and twigs and lined with ferns, mosses, dry leaves and feathers. The nests are situated on the ground, usually at the base of a stump, near a fallen log or under a tree.

Young are precocial, leaving the nest to follow the hen shortly after hatching. In the early part of the season large broods are often seen, but later on from two to four chicks is more usual, the others having succumbed to predation, parasitical worms, and other diseases to which these birds are subject.

In July the cock birds migrate up the hills, leaving the hens and their broods on the slash where they remain for varying lengths of time. Some years they move up early, often before the legal shooting season opens, other years they remain longer and a good harvest is taken. The factors controlling this movement are not clearly understood, but it seems that weather conditions are responsible in part.

There is little need to describe the blue grouse here. The illustration shows a cock bird with large air sacs distended on the neck; with tail spread to show the rounded tail feathers; and with the grey terminal band prominently displayed. These points are diagnostic in separating the sooty grouse group from the dusky birds found east of the Cascades. The hen here depicted below the cock is a mottled grey and brown. The tail band is present however, and serves in identification.

On the Queen Charlotte Islands we find a blue grouse of this group which is characterized, in the hens chiefly, by a much redder hue. These are known as Sitka blue grouse, but they are very closely related to the sooty grouse of the Mainland coast and islands. Next week we shall discuss the dusky grouse of the Interior, and the three subspecies which make up that group.

BY PETER BLOXHAM

LONDON (NANA) — Prof. Auguste Piccard soon will seek to raise—perhaps lower is a better word—the record of two French naval officers who recently dived to the greatest depth ever reached by man. It will be a big moment for Piccard, the shy, odd-looking Belgian scientist with a penchant for vertical travel.

The French naval officers descended in a bathyscaphe, the diving device invented by Piccard, to a depth of 2,100 meters (6,889 feet) off Toulon. Previously the two officers, Lieutenant-Commander Houet and Engineer Will, went down 1,350 meters (5,086 feet).

Twenty-two years ago Piccard made the world gasp by soaring 10 miles upward in a balloon. Now, with his 31-year-old son, Jacques, he hopes to plunge two miles downward into the unexplored depths on the maiden voyage of their new, secretly designed bathyscaphe.

What do the Frenchmen and the professor seek in these perilous bids for new depth records? In the glow of powerful lamps they will see, perhaps, great underwater forests and strange, luminous creatures that prowl only at these fabulous pressures; others that walk blind across the ooze on stiltlike legs.

They may meet giant squids, with limbs long enough to clutch their odd crafts. They may meet "big eye," a creature with an eye five times the size of the rest of its body to gather what dim light it can in the quest for food.

Sea serpents? After the scientific bombshell of the coelacanth that exploded last year, who can say what weird creature may not be lurking there?

Conditions in the great depths have remained unchanged since the age of fishes, 300,000,000 years ago. Many more of the odd shapes scientists have found embedded in rocks as fossilized remains still may roam the extreme depths.

Picard's craft is something like an underwater balloon. Instead of a gas bag, a large cylindrical tank, about 30 feet long, holds 25,000 gallons of gasoline and 10 tons of steel shot.

Beneath this cylinder is suspended a 10-ton steel globe, which holds the two-man crew and scientific instruments.

The gasoline, lighter than water, gives buoyancy. When it is released and water flows into its place, the bathyscaphe will sink at a controlled pace. When Picard wishes to ascend, the steel shot held in place by electromagnets is released.

For this dive the professor will have no link with the surface. Should things go wrong his craft cannot be hauled back by cable. But the professor is sure they won't go wrong.

He is sure, though in 1948 he had to abandon a projected similar dive in an earlier version of the craft. Perhaps his confidence is shown in the fact that he has fitted his new craft with an engine, so that when he reaches the sea bed he will be able to explore it horizontally.

As the professor and his son submerge, the green water will at first seem disappointingly empty of life. There will be only floating fragments of seaweed.

Four hundred feet down, they will still be able to read a newspaper by the pale rays of sunlight filtering through the water.

As the depth of water develops, a force of thousands of tons soon will be pressing against the sphere's thick walls. Should a joint crack, the sphere would be squashed like a tomato under a steam hammer.

Professor Piccard hopes to open up a vista that will solve many problems. We shall know more, if he succeeds, about fauna and sea growths; how they vary in different pressure layers, in size and destiny, what sort of fish they are that never come within range of line or trawl.

Increase During Week In Job Applications

An increased number of applications for employment was noted for the week ending Friday, the National Employment Service reported, offsetting the number of placements made in the same week.

The only outstanding demand for men is for commission salesmen in lines from household appliances to life insurance. There is no current demand for carpenters; however, there is no sign of slackening in the trade at the present.

Vacancies for skilled tradesmen include those in the plumbing, electrical draughting, sheet metal trades.

There has been little change in the employment picture for women, it was reported. Domestic work continues to offer the largest number of vacancies with a number of unfilled jobs being available to waitresses, sales clerks and stenographers, it was reported.

A small increase in the demand for sales and related workers has been noticed due to some students in summer work leaving jobs before returning to school, the office said.

Victoria Regiment To Take Part In Exercise at Wainwright, Alta.

BY ROY PARRETT

Victoria's Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) will take part in Exercise "Buffalo IV" at Wainwright, Alberta, this week. Members of the local infantry unit joined other Western regiments at the big Alberta army camp Saturday.

Buffalo IV will be the largest peace-time army exercise ever held in Canada. It will be a divisional-scale manoeuvre, involving units recently returned from Korea, units bound for Germany and reserve units of the 15th Infantry Brigade. Training will take place under simulated battle conditions.

COMMANDING OFFICER

The Canadian Scottish contingent will be commanded by Major Jack Fawcett, second-in-command of the Highland unit. Major S. E. Park commanded the troops en route to Wainwright, and will act as Scottish second-in-command on the exercise.

Warrant Officer A. E. Clevette will be regimental sergeant-major for Buffalo IV.

The battalion's padre, Capt. J. L. W. McLean, accompanied the unit to Wainwright. Capt. A. M. McLeod, adjuant, handled the administrative arrangements for the move by air from Patricia Bay.

Gunners from Victoria's active force batteries are also taking part in Buffalo IV. "D" troop of the 129th Anti-aircraft [illegible] C. M. E. West, left last week for Wainwright.

Other men of the Gordon Head battery will get some sea time in this week. They will leave for Vancouver aboard HMCS Sioux to take part in parades marking the opening of the Pacific National Exhibition. The gunners will return to the city August 26, aboard the cruiser HMCS Ontario.

* * *

The band of the RCAF tactical air force will visit the city August 31. The smart band will play two concerts, which will be conducted by Flying Officer Leo Corcoran.

The airmen will appear at the Veterans' Hospital at 2.30 p.m. and at Royal Athletic Park at 7 p.m.

Admittance to the ball game and concert will be free to airmen and airwomen in uniform. Regular ball fans will see the band perform as an added attraction at the park.

* * *

Recent enlistees were Airwomen B. C. Graves, 629 Niagara Street; M. D. Wells, Ladysmith; P. M. Williamson, Courtenay; L. M. Murlak, Courtenay; W. F. Metcalfe, Comox; J. J. Malloch, Millstream Road, Langford, and M. L. Graham of Sooke.

SERVICE PAYS OFF

Service in the air cadets paid off for AC1 G. B. Ward of Comox who joined the RCAF last month. He was graded AC1 on enlistment because of his previous air force experience.

A local Chinese airman, G. S. Leung, 612 Fisgard Street, has been posted to the RCAF selection centre at London, Ont., for possible training in aircrew.

* * *

A Vancouver soldier was one of the last Canadians to leave the hill known to thousands as "Little Gibraltar," once a key stronghold of the 25th Canadian Brigade's line in Korea. Pte. Frank McLennan, 145 Robson Street, a member of the PPCLI, pulled out with the hill's last occupants.

ROADS SEALED OFF

Stalemate Continues On Wright

A stalemate over the situation of an MLA-elect continued in Victoria Saturday.

With the city hall closed for any possible action, it appeared that a split has developed over whether Percy Wright, assistant city clerk, should be granted leave of absence to take his seat in the legislature.

Mr. Wright was elected as a Social Credit candidate for Victoria riding Saturday he again said he had no comment on the situation.

DECISION URGED

Alderman Robert Macmillan said, however, he felt that city manager C. C. Wyatt should decide whether leave of absence can be granted.

Mr. Wright last week was notified by Mayor Claude Harrison that an investigation by the city solicitor found no legal authority for such leave when the person is going to another position with remuneration.

Alderman Percy Scurrah has stated he believes the decision is the manager's job, while Ald. Arthur Dowell said he is against granting the leave.

Long Service of Airman Wins Reward

Flight Lieutenant Norman M. Wallace of Victoria, whose sister, Mrs. William Bromley, resides at 2776 Dewdney Street, is invested with the Long Service and Good Conduct Medal in recognition of 18 years' loyal service by Air Vice-Marshal J. G. Kerr, CB, AFC, CD (left), air officer commanding, RCAF Training Command. In the background is Group Captain William Newson, DSO, DFC and Bar, one of a number of senior staff officers from Training Command Headquarters at Trenton, Ontario, who attended the investiture. Group Captain Newson, senior air staff officer at the RCAF's Training Command headquarters, is the son of Colonel and Mrs. H. M. Newson of Victoria.

Funeral on Tuesday For Mrs. J. G. Scott

Funeral services for Mrs. Jessie Gladys Scott, who died suddenly Saturday at her home, 912 Heywood Avenue, will be held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel at 3.15 p.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Scott was the widow of the late Ernest H. Scott, president and founder of the famous Scott Radio Corporation, Chicago. Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott were born in New Zealand.

RETURNED TO NELSON

After Mr. Scott's death at the former Mt. Tolmie residence in 1951, Mrs. Scott returned to Nelson, New Zealand, to live with her father and sister. She returned here in March of this year.

She had planned to complete the editing of some of her husband's well-known world travel films which had become his hobby in retirement.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott were held in high esteem by hundreds of New Zealand servicemen who trained in Canada during the war. They organized clubs for their fellow countrymen and wrote letters to the relatives of every man they met saying the boys were in good health and enjoying themselves.

Mrs. Scott was admired by all who knew her for her quiet, sincere personality, and exemplary Christian principles.

Mrs. Scott is survived by her father and sister in Nelson, New Zealand.

Danish fruit exports in 1952 amounted to 25,000 tons, almost 10 times as much as in 1945.

Doctors Seek Secret of Strange Case

Indian Beauty, 18, Lives Without Any Food or Water

BOMBAY (NANA) — Eighteen-year-old Dhanalaxmi is a girl with a secret that has made even the government of India sit up.

In a land where miracles are reported on the average once an hour, this slim, dusky beauty apparently has solved the problem of how to live without either food or water. She has done so now for more than a year.

And to India, with millions on the near-starvation level, that is very important. There is serious discussion whether she absorbs nourishment from sunlight.

Dhanalaxmi leads a normal, healthy and happy life. She knows nothing—and cares less—about religious mysticism.

Small, but rather on the plump side, she shares in all the housework typical of a middle-class Indian family—she lives with her father and nine other children at Suntikoppa, near Mercara, in the State of Coorg.

Born in 1935, she ate heartily till she was 14, then her appetite diminished. She began by refusing to eat for three days. Ten months later, she didn't eat for 12 days.

Two years later she fasted for 22 days—she just didn't feel like eating. Worried, her father and stepmother sent her, on the advice of doctors, to three hospitals. All sorts of things were tried to stimulate her appetite, even forcible feeding, but Dhanalaxmi could not assimilate anything.

NOTHING ABNORMAL

The civil surgeon of Coorg State, on the instructions of the chief commissioner, took her under his care. X-rays showed nothing abnormal. "And," said the civil surgeon, in his report to the commissioner, "she seems quite hale and healthy, cheerful and bright, with no signs of exhaustion. She sleeps soundly, without dreams."

The government of India was impressed. Last week it sanctioned a grant of $275 toward expenses Dhanalaxmi and her father will incur during exhaustive examination of the girl at the Bangalore General Hospital.

POWER OF LIFE

To emphasize the government's extraordinary interest in the case, the minister for home affairs of the State of Coorg put it this way: "If minute particles of an atom can release such magnitude of power, is it not possible that Dhanalaxmi has something which gives her sustaining power of life?

"Has she developed glands that absorb energy from sunlight, or has she secret hormones giving her strength to sustain life?"

That is what he hopes to find out. Dhanalaxmi has set a problem for world science. The world awaits the report of the miracle girl of Mercara.

NOT FULLY EXPLORED

New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns, probably the largest in the world, have been only partly explored, 32 miles. There are three levels in the caverns, 754, 900 and 1,320 feet below the surface.

Captivity in Korea Not Entirely Wasted

KURE, Japan, (NANA) — Says tall, good-looking Lieut. Tony Perrins, of the Northumberland Fusiliers, showing no ill-effects from his Korean wound and imprisonment. "I do believe that two years we spent in the prison camp have not been wasted.

"We know the enemy better. We know his mind better. We know something of his methods. And young officers have had an opportunity of learning more than they could ever do in normal circumstances from their own men — their difficulties, their hopes and their tremendous loyalties."

On atrocities, Perrins shrugged. "When you fight Asiatics you must accept the fact that their ideas on human life and suffering are somewhat different from ours."

Perrins is the first British officer to reach the Kure reception camp in Japan for returned British war prisoners. His mature, tolerant and sophisticated judgment is reflected in varying degree and form by 200 other British soldiers, who have reached sanctuary in Japan.

The men are matter of fact, good-humored and grateful for the warm reception awaiting them. Some suggest they have brooding memories of bitter fighting, brutal ordeals and lost comrades.

SOME ARE HATED

Some — let there be no doubt about this — have an implacable hatred for the wretched small minority of the weak, misled or expedient prisoners who responded to Communist indoctrination and who are contemptuously know as "progressives" — the Chinese term for "converts."

On arrival at the big British base at Iwakuni, war prisoners are taken by launch across the beautiful inland sea, past resurgent Hiroshima, the ancient "floating temple" of Miyajima and the former staff college of the Imperial Japanese Navy, on Etajima, to Kure, where Japan's great battle fleet was built in ironclad secrecy.

At a gaily beflagged British camp they are greeted by the Royal Dorset band, examined by doctors and given a complete new handout of clothing.

For those who wish, there are escorted tours to green hills or near-by beaches. But, subject to the essential needs of discipline, the men are allowed to do as they wish; and all suggestion of regimentation has been lifted.

Featured at Provincial Track Meet

Although he didn't win an event, Hans Voge of the Vancouver Olympic Club compiled enough points in field events to capture men's aggregate championship trophy with 11½ points. Norma Hughes of Vancouver walked off with the women's aggregate crown by racking up 13 points for three-point lead over Vancouver's Anne Reid. Two champions are shown above just after prize presentation.

Always one of the most spectacular events in any meet, high jump proved no exception for disappointing crowd Saturday. Here, Dr. Dave Blair of Vancouver appears to be knocking off bar, but a last-second kick turned it into a winning jump. Blair, who holds the British Columbia high jump record of 6 feet, 4¼ inches, was three inches short of mark Saturday, but still won easily. Three B.C. marks were broken, however, and nine track records tumbled as B.C.'s top track and field stars turned in good times despite a track made heavy by rain.

Three Island Track Stars Named to Provincial Team

BY IAN GLENDAY

Two Victoria thinclads and a junior from Cumberland Saturday night were named to three of the 10 berths on B.C.'s team which will represent the province at the Dominion inter-provincial track and field championships at Toronto September 4 and 5.

Bill Parnell, British Empire Games mile champion; Cliff Salmond, veteran Olympic Games and Empire Games distance runner, and Terry Tobacco, 17-year-old Cumberland star running for Victoria YMCA, were all selected by the British Columbia Track and Field Association at a meeting which followed the provincial championships at Victoria High Saturday afternoon.

LEAVES SUNDAY

The team, which includes eight men and two women, will leave next Sunday by air for the East and will attend a track clinic before the championships with Victoria's Bruce Humber, who will be one of the coaches.

Other members of the team will include Bruce Springbett of Vancouver, 100 yards and 220 yards; Doug Clement of New Westminster, quarter-mile and half-mile; John Pavelich of Vancouver, discus and shot put; Dave Blair of Vancouver, high jump; Dave Stafford of Langley Prairie, broad jump; Alice Whitty of Vancouver, high jump; and Alice Folz of Vancouver, hurdles.

THREE RECORDS

Despite poor track conditions caused by rain which fell during the morning and afternoon of the all-day meet, three British Columbia records toppled, one was tied, and nine new track records were established by the starry field of athletes.

Pavelich set a new B.C. mark in the discus with a heave of 141 feet, seven inches to break the old record of 135 feet, and won the shot put with a toss of 46 feet, six-and-a-half inches.

The other two records were written into the book by feminine competitors.

Norma Hughes of the Vancouver Olympic Club set a new mark in the women's shot put with a toss of 32 feet, one inch, while Miss Folz of Vancouver's Western Sports Club, cracked the provincial women's 80 metres hurdles' record in the time of 12.1 seconds.

TOBACCO STARS

Springbett, Clement and Pavelich were double winners in the meet and completely dominated in their respective fields. Failing to get the competition expected from Victoria's Bob Hutchinson in the sprints, Springbett was nevertheless pressed by Tobacco, one of the brightest track prospects to show here in years.

The long-striding up-Islander placed second in both the century dash and 220-yard event and his pressure in the latter race helped Springbett to tie the track and provincial record of 22.2 seconds.

SCOUTED

An interested spectator at the smoothly-run meet was Hec Edmundson, coach of the University of Washington track team, who was taking special note of Tobacco for possible enrollment at his school.

Hutchison, who hasn't been in the best of shape this season, developed leg trouble early in the meet and was forced to drop out just after starting the final leg of the 440-yard relay.

Salmond's victory in the gruelling 12-lap, three-mile event was probably the greatest of the day. Trying to make a comeback after remaining fairly inactive during the past two years, Salmond took an early lead, lost it to Jack Kyle of Vancouver Olympic Club several times on the final three laps, then staged a kick 100 yards from the tape to win going away.

AGGREGATE WINNERS

Although failing to pick up a first, Hans Voge of the Vancouver Olympic Club compiled 11½ points to win the men's aggregate crown, while Miss Hughes won the women's title with 13 points.

Victoria YMCA and Vancouver Olympic Club tied for team aggregate with 59½ points apiece while the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers took the women's team title with 38 points.

Polio Series To Continue Tuesday Night

Second game in the best-of-three benefit softball series between Capital City Gasmen and Chinese Students will be played at the Upper Central Park diamond Tuesday at 6.30 p.m.

Proceeds from the series are going to the Vic Van Isle Kinsmen Club's polio fund.

Gasmen, Senior "A" Men's Softball League champions, and Vancouver Island, representatives in the elimination series for the British Columbia title, won the opener, 4-2, Thursday.

Commercial Hockey Seeks Fourth Team

Doug Fletcher, well-known Victoria sportsman, was elected president of the Victoria Commercial Hockey League for the second successive year at the annual meeting held recently.

Bill Oliver was returned as secretary-treasurer.

Three teams which played in the league last season will be definite starters this year but one squad has been forced to drop out. Navy representatives at the meeting stated they were prepared to enter a squad in the league this season, as were Jim Lackie and Dick Irving, managers of Victoria Merchants and Individual Cleaners respectively.

However, Army has given up its franchise as the club received a recent legal ruling stating that no non-service personal can be permitted to play for the soldiers.

Army officials said that they could not form an all-service team, making it impossible to carry on this season.

The Victoria Branch of the Provincial Government Employees' Association will be given first chance at the franchise and if it turns it down, the Victoria Minor Hockey Association will then be given an opportunity to gain admittance into the league.

League officials also announced that a request for the use of Memorial Arena on Wednesday nights has been made to the arena commission. All league games were played on a Monday last season but as the Cougars are scheduled for several Monday night games this season, the CHL is forced to change its schedule.

INTER-LEAGUE PLAY

Inter-league games against Vancouver Commercial Hockey League teams are also expected to be played again this season.

Oliver requested Saturday night that anyone with refereeing experience who would like to officiate in games this season phone him at G 4770.

VICTORIA	53	56	.390	10½

Victoria Tyees completed their final Prairie swing of the WIL season by taking a pair of heartbreaking 6-5 losses at Edmonton, Saturday, to end their series against the Eskimos with one victory in four games.

The Tyees, able to win only one of their seven games at Edmonton this year, dropped into sole possession of the league's cellar position with the double loss as Tri-City downed Salem Senators in the first game of a doubleheader.

BOOT LEAD

Bob Drilling was the loser of the 10-inning afternoon game, taking his 15th loss after he appeared headed for his 14th win when the Tyees scored twice in the top of the 10th frame to take a 5-3 lead.

However, the Victoria right-hander ran into trouble in the bottom half of the inning, putting three runners on base before giving way to Bill Prior with no one out. Prior was unable to stop the rally and the Eskimos scored three times to win it.

John Conant, who relieved starter Don Tisnerat with one out in the 10th inning, gained credit for the victory which gave him a league-leading record of 22 wins. He has lost nine.

Granny Gladstone continued his long-ball hitting when he smashed his 19th home run.

LORINO GOES NINE

Southpaw Ben Lorino turned in his first route-going performance for the Tyees this season as he lost his second decision in the nightcap. Lorino struck out four, walked one and hit one batter while giving up 10 hits.

Jack Widner, who went all the way for the win, also gave up 10 hits, issued one base on balls and hit one man. He struck out five.

The double win for the Eskimos boosted them back into contention for second-half honors, keeping them within three games of the Lewiston Broncs, who vaulted into first place with a twin victory over the staggering Spokane Indians.

John Marshall was the Lewiston star, in both games, coming on in relief to put down Spokane threats as the Broncs won by scores 5-3 and 5-4, for their 10th and 11th straight victories and their sixth in a row over the former leaders.

Calgary Stampeders also notched a double victory, defeating Vancouver Capilanos, 7-3 and 5-1 at Calgary. Charlie Mead hit his 25th homer for Calgary in the nightcap to tie team-mate Don Hunter for the league lead.

Honor Gehrig

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City paid tribute Friday to one of the greatest baseball players it ever produced—the late Lou Gehrig, the Yankee first-baseman who set an all-time major league record by playing in 2,130 consecutive games.

Mayor Impellitteri, Gehrig's mother and ball players who had played with the "iron man" took part in a ceremony during which a plaque to his memory was dedicated at his birthplace, 309 East 94th Street.

U.S. Nine Squares Hart Cup Series

Port Angeles All-Stars halted the bid by Farmer Construction to bring the Hart Trophy back to Victoria by handing the city senior amateur baseball league club a double defeat at Royal Athletic Park Saturday.

The American team, which dropped the first two games of the annual series at Port Angeles a week ago, won the afternoon game, 7-3, and took a 2-1 victory in an 11-inning contest at night. It was not announced if a deciding game would be played.

IRONMAN

Southpaw Bill Garner turned in a strong-armed pitching performance for the Victorians, going the route in both games. Although he was reached for 11 hits in the opener, Garner struck out 16 and issued only two bases on balls. Don Lenoye held Farmers to seven hits and struck out nine in pitching the victory.

Victoria took the lead with three runs in the opening inning but the visitors came back with a five-run outburst in the third when Gerry Parker's error with two out, set the stage for Merv Cleland's bases-loaded triple and Lenoye's one-run single, giving the winners four unearned tallies.

MORE ERRORS

Garner hooked up with right-hander Ron Aitken in an interesting mound duel in the night game. Errors by Parker and Ron Martin helped Port Angeles to an unearned run in the sixth inning and Farmers tied it up when Lowell Hodges, caught off third when Doug Stewart missed an attempted squeeze bunt, scored on catcher Dave Cameron's error.

Lenoye singled to start the visitors' rally in the 11th and moved to third as Merv Cleland doubled. Lenoye was out at the plate on Cameron's ground ball, Cleland taking third and later scoring the winning run on Garner's wild pitch.

Garner struck out 10 in the second game while Aitken set 12 Victoria batters down on strikes.

Cooper Again Lowers Mark At Speedway

Dave Cooper and Bruce Passmore shared major honors in the stock-car racing program held before a good crowd at Shearing's Speedway on Cowichan Bay Road, Saturday night.

Cooper, leading the drivers in season point standings, again lowered the track record for stockers and piloted his black machine to first place in the helmet dash and first heat race. Cooper was timed through one lap in 17.22 seconds compared with the former mark of 17.42.

Passmore won the second heat event and drove a spectacular race to win the featured "A" main event with Dave Miller finishing second and Cooper, third.

Dave Francis provided the fans with a thrill in the third heat race when his car, after spinning out on a turn, was bumped by Jack Spalding's machine and rolled over twice into the infield. Francis was uninjured.

Ranger Game Confirmed; Here Sept. 29

New York Rangers will play an exhibition game at Memorial Arena on Tuesday, September 29, against Victoria Cougars. The date was confirmed yesterday by Fred Hutchinson, Cougar general manager.

The game is the one of three already lined up for the Victoria WHL club. It will meet Seattle Bombers here on Friday, October 2 and in Seattle either on September 26 or October 3.

Hutchinson also announced that defenseman Ross Lowe had written to the club expressing his pleasure at his move to Victoria and stating he planned to report 10 days before the start of training. The Cougars will open their training in Seattle about September 20 if the Shamrocks reach the Mann Cup final and a day or two earlier if Memorial Arena is available by that time.

Tillicums Divide Games In Island Softball Final

Tillicums, city senior "B" men's softball champions, and Port Alberni Super-Valu are tied with one game each in the best-of-three series for the Vancouver Island championship.

The teams split a double-header Saturday. Tillicums won the opener, 10-1, behind Alf Aspinal's neat three-hitter. Aspinal came on in relief in the second game and was charged with the loss as Port Alberni won out, 11-10.

The third and deciding contest in the series will be played at Port Alberni today at 3 p.m.

SCORE ON ERROR

The only run off Aspinal in the afternoon contest came in the top of the ninth when the Super-Valu crew worked a runner home on two errors and a single.

Aspinal relieved John Oliver in the sixth with an 8-7 lead and then allowed Port Alberni to go ahead in the next two innings. Tillicums rallied for two runs in the top of the ninth but could not push the tying run across.

Stewart hit a home run for Port Alberni in the sixth inning of the second game.

McKay Leads Heals Shoot

Capt. W. B. McKay of the RCEME paced the marksmen at Heals Rifle Range Saturday. Competing at the 300 and 500-yard courses, McKay led with a score of 97 out of a possible 100.

Sgt. Frank Drysdale also had a 97 total but was judged second by the count back. Ron Mecredy was third with 94.

Complete scores follow: Capt. McKay, 49-48—97; Sgt. Drysdale, 49-48—97; L.-Bdr. Mecredy, 47-47—94; S.Sgt. Dave Mecredy, 45-48—93; Sgt. C. Hobson, 46-47—93; F. Morse, 43-48—91; Bill McCoubrey, 44-45—89.

The Weiler-Regan Trophy shoot will start next Saturday and will continue over the next three Saturdays.

City Lacrosse Teams Win Two Island Titles

NANAIMO — Two Victoria minor lacrosse teams won sudden-death games for Vancouver Island championships in easy fashion here Saturday night.

Victoria Juvenile "B" All-Stars whipped Nanaimo, 21-1, while the Pee Wee All-Stars trounced the up-Islanders, 13-3, in the opening game.

Vic Wescott paced the Pee Wees with six goals while his line-mate, Bruce McLay, added four. Frank Taylor and Ross Roskamp each scored four times for the juveniles.

Freddie Wooster turned in a brilliant netminding performance for the juveniles, blanking Nanaimo after the two-minute mark of the first period when Bill Tyrell scored on a free shot.

Juveniles—Frank Taylor 4, Russ Roskamp 4, Mike Fox 3, Stu Smith 2, Bob McKee, Dennis Atkinson 2, Des Johnstone 1, Ed Wowalyk 1, Don Hamilton 1, Norm Parker 1. Total—21.

Canadian Football Intrigues Anxious Germans

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders are involved enough with American football import problems to excuse a little tardiness in attending to other correspondence.

While the Rough Riders concern themselves with wrangles over John Kissell, imported from Cleveland Browns, and Avatus Stone, transplanted from Chicago Cardinals, two Germans are getting impatient at Ottawa's failure to respond to their offers to play for Riders.

The German pair wrote the Riders several weeks ago. Friday, a second communication was received from Offensbach on the Main:

"Dear friends: You sure are astonished to get a second letter from us. Well, I'll tell you the reason at once. Some weeks ago in our newspaper an article was printed in which we could read that we wanted to emigrate to Canada and play there in a football team. Was reading that, we would had to get a letter from you, but we got none.

"By the way, we want to know where there is any possibility to play in your association or not. I guess you think we only want to play football, but we don't want that only, as we have a professional training. One of us can make a contract now over here by our football club for one year, therefore we want to know what you mine.

"Well that's all by now what I've got to tell you. Best wishes by now. Your German friends."

The signatures couldn't be made out but the two Christian names appeared to be Wolfgang and Heini.

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANG

A check of Saanich Inlet boathouses yesterday indicated that the 515 finalists in the third annual ladder derby staged by the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association should have no trouble catching a salmon. But they may have trouble getting a big one—and today is when big ones count the most.

"A lot of cohos and small springs and the odd big one" was the boathouse consensus.

Holder's Boathouse at Deep Cove reported fishing good with coho, a few humpbacks and small springs providing most of the action. However, teen-aged Manny Johnson boated a 23-pounder off Cole Point Friday morning using a Wallace Highliner plug and three ounces of weight, and two 14-pounders were also brought in. Mrs. Holder also said one inboard was still available as well as several rowboats in the event any finalist still needed a boat.

From the Anchorage and Hall's Boathouse came similar reports. Hall's reported good fishing with several limit catches of small salmon and a few which could be termed as "big." Biggest of these was taken by Lorne Heglin, who probably wishes it had waited for his lure until today. Heglin, a derby finalist, boated a 36-pounder Friday just in front of the island at the Goldstream end. He caught it on a blue herring scale Luckie Louie, using a small planer and 250 feet of line.

Harry Peard reported from the Brentwood area that "there are a lot of coho around." There are also some bigger ones. Cliff Whipple had a 24¾-pounder on a Mac's Squid plug Friday, Bill Prior boated a 27-pounder Tuesday, George Wale had a button-winning 20¾-pounder on Wednesday, and there were quite a few more than 12 pounds. Wale and Prior caught their big ones in McKenzie Bay.

* * *

Ted Reynolds, who undoubtedly put in more hours of fishing than any other qualifier, made the fishoff after all, getting in on the second list. He'll have the added handicap in the final of fishing from the Percy J in a strangely-assorted trio which will include Andy Anderson and Bill Walker. Lightning is not likely to strike in the same place twice. . . . Believe in numerology? If you do then Mrs. W. S. Silburn, Jack Main, Don McLean, James Peterson and Benny Armstrong will rate as your favorites. The first four qualified in the seventh week with seven-pound salmon while Armstrong qualified on the seventh rung in the seventh week with a 14¾-pound fish. . . . Among the missing in this year's fishoff is Mrs. Olive Anderson, who put her faith in the wrong guide, husband and committee-chairman Andy . . . the number of family combinations is a large one and include husband-wife, brother and father-son combinations. The Jamieson family, for instance, will have four chances to click. There is Jack and sons Ken and John as well as brother Walter. There are 17 or 18 Smiths but no one has been able to separate them into family groups. . . . George B. and Kathy Williams are also among the qualifiers but there is no Stan, which surprised exactly no one . . . about 50 of the female species of angler qualified and wouldn't it be a blow to male pride if one of them should come in with the biggest salmon.

* * *

Pity the poor ladder derby committee. Members put in hundreds of hours, often at the expense of personal affairs, to run the event for the enjoyment, and benefit of association members. Yet most of what they get in return is trouble and abuse.

Many of the 28 derbyists who qualified in one of the 10 weekly competitions only to be disqualified because of failure to pick up their fishoff tickets by the announced deadline, were, understandingly, quite unhappy. Several of them were, and still are, downright angry and bearing the brunt of their personal feeling are, of course, the fellows who made the derby possible. It hardly seems fair. Any committee has to be governed by a set of rules and has to see that they are enforced. And that is exactly what happened in this case.

There were some excellent reasons for the failure of some of disqualified to pick up their tickets and committee members were sympathetic but correctly felt that if an exception was made for one it would have to be made for all. They also pointed out that the 477 anglers who picked up their tickets before the deadline would likely take a dim view of the matter if one or more of the major prizes should be won by anyone fishing only because the rules weren't kept.

City Cup Stars Share New Car

Ontario Regains Willingdon Cup; Victoria Golfers Lead B.C. Team

KANAWAKI GOLF CLUB, Montreal — Ontario regained the Willingdon Cup here Saturday by turning in an aggregate score of 590, three less than Quebec, which led at the end of the first 18 holes.

British Columbia, defending champion, never was in serious contention and wound up third with a team total of 604.

KESSELRING BEST

Gerry Kesselring paced the Ontario team to its victory by shooting 69-70 for a one-under-par total of 139, five strokes better than any other golfer in the team event. Teammate Nick Weslock helped Kesselring overcome the nine-stroke lead Quebec had at the halfway mark with a last-round 69 and a 145 total. Veteran Phil Farley was steady to post 75-74 for 149 while Jack Nash slumped to an 83 after an opening 74.

With Brian McGuigan shooting a par 70, Don Doe and Johnny Turner getting 71s and Tommy Riddell a 73, Quebec seemed on its way to an easy victory with 285 for the first 18 holes.

But only Doe was good in the second round and his 73 was not enough to protect the lead. McGuigan soared to an 81, Turner took 78 strokes and Riddell 76.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

British Columbia was 16 strokes off the pace at the halfway mark with only the two Victoria members of the team in top form. Bob Fleming had a 73 and veteran Bob Morrison a 74 but Dick Moore had 75 and Walt McElroy a 79. McElroy found his game on the second 18 to come in with a 72 but Moore took 80 strokes, Fleming 76 and the steady Morrison 75. Morrison and Fleming tied with 149s to lead the B.C. team.

Manitoba finished fourth with 609, just one stroke ahead of fifth-place Alberta. The Prince Edward Island-New Brunswick combination was sixth with 622, Saskatchewan seventh with 638 and Nova Scotia far in the rear with 642.

Vancouver Tennis Stars Dominate Duncan Meet

DUNCAN, B.C. — Vancouver players dominated the Vancouver Island tennis championships at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club Saturday as all but one of the finals was completed in a rain-interrupted program.

TRIPLE WINNER

Lois Reid of Vancouver won the women's singles championship by defeating Jean Bardsley, also of Vancouver, 6-4, 6-4. The two finalists teamed up in the women's doubles final to defeat Vivian Palmer and Lynn Newton of the host club, 6-2, 6-1.

Miss Reid then paired with Vancouver's K. Burrows in the mixed doubles final to gain her third victory of the day, a 6-3, 6-3 decision over the Vancouver combination of Miss Bardsley and Colin Walker.

Art Jeffrey and Colin Walker, both of Vancouver, edged V. Page and C. Clegg of Seattle, 10-8, 6-3, in the men's doubles final. Men's singles final between Jim Flynn of Portland and J. Volnich of Vancouver's Jericho Club was postponed because of rain and will be played off Sunday.

Lowe and Bostick whipped the Vancouver combination of Art Jeffrey and Walker, 3-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, to annex the men's doubles crown.

The league-leading New York Yankees dropped a 10-4 decision to the Philadelphia Athletics Saturday but lost no ground in the American League race as the runner-up Chicago White Sox lost an 11-inning, 2-1, decision to the Detroit Tigers.

Eddie Robinson blasted his 18th and 19th homers of the year, one off loser Eddie Ford and the other off Tom Gorman. The win snapped a seven-game Athletic losing streak.

Ray Boone of the Tigers tripled in the 11th and scored on Walt Dropo's grounder to break up a pitching duel between Ned Garver and rookie Bob Keegan. Both Garver, who gained his ninth victory and Keegan, who suffered his third loss, pitched scoreless ball until the 10th.

PLATES WINNER

Two singles by Ted Williams drove in two runs as Boston Red Sox edged Washington Senators, 4-3. Williams' second RBI, which proved the decisive run of the game, tallied Billy Goodman and climaxed Boston's three-run uprising in the seventh.

Preacher Roe, who hasn't lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates since they traded him to Brooklyn Dodgers in 1948, kept that slate clean Saturday with a 5-3 victory over his floundering ex-teammates.

Although the veteran 34-year-old Roe beat Pittsburgh for the third time this season, he needed help from Clem Labine with one out in the ninth.

BRAVES HOLD ON

Milwaukee Braves won their seventh straight the hard way when Johnny Logan singled in the 14th inning to give his team a 2-1 victory over Chicago Cubs.

Bob Buhl went all the way for the winners, holding the Cubs to five hits. Howie Pollet, Cub starter, looked like he had a shutout until the Braves notched a tying run in the bottom of the ninth.

The plunging New York Giants continued their slide as they suffered two defeats at the hands of the Philadelphia Phillies. Carl Drews limited the Giants to five hits in the opener for a 7-1 win, and Jim Konstanty and Robin Roberts combined to give the Phillies a 6-5 win the second game.

Capital City Gasmen Capture Island Title

LADYSMITH — Capital City Gasmen Saturday night captured the Vancouver Island Senior "A" Men's softball championship.

Winners of the Senior "A" Men's Softball League, the city and lower Island title, Gasmen added their fourth championship by edging a fighting Ladysmith squad, 7-6, in the second game of the best-of-three series.

Capital City won the series in straight games, taking the opener, 5-4, in another close one, last Sunday.

IN FINAL

Gasmen has now earned the right to claim a berth in the four-team double-loss elimination tournament for the British Columbia title. This tourney will be played in Vancouver starting August 29.

The league champions won the opening game of the series with a two-run outburst in the bottom of the ninth inning. Saturday, it was their turn to receive a bad scare as Ladysmith New Westerns rallied for two runs and left the tying run stranded on third base in the eighth and final inning.

FALLS SHORT

Big Doug Brinham led off the bottom of the eighth with a walk. John Mitchell followed with a singe and both runners advanced on a wild pitch and came home when Ray Johnston slammed out of Norm Martin's offerings for a double. Johnston went to third on a wild pitch but he was left there as Jack Copp grounded out to the pitcher and Ron Martin, pinch-hitting for Henry Wong was struck out. The game was called at the end of the eighth with darkness setting in.

Seven Ladysmith errors were a big help to the Capital City crew. They scored two runs in the first inning on three singles and an error and made it a 4-0 lead in the second on three miscues and two wild pitches.

Sooke Girls Win Opener In B.C. Final

Sooke Juvenile Girls took a one-game lead in the best-of-three series for the British Columbia juvenile girls softball championship by defeating a Milner team, 19-1, at Sooke Saturday.

Second game in the series will be played Sunday afternoon at 2.15 p.m. and the third game, if necessary, Sunday evening.

Lorraine Sheilds set the mainland crew down on just one hit, a single by B. Clark in the second inning, when Milner scored its one run. She struck out 15 and walked four.

Yankee Star On Way Home

HONOLULU (UP) — Marine Capt. Gerry Coleman slipped quietly through Honolulu Saturday en route home from the Far East for discharge.

The former New York Yankee infielder was airborne for the 10-hour trans-Pacific flight to the mainland before marine authorities disclosed his brief island stopover.

Coleman, returning from air combat duty in Korea, was aboard a military chartered Flying Tiger plane which was slated to land at Travis air force base, north of San Francisco, at 5 a.m., PDT, Sunday.

Castellani Wins

TOLEDO (UP) — Rocky Castellani scored a technical knockout over Jackie Keough, Cleveland tugboat captain, at 2.45 of the ninth round at the sports arena here tonight.

It Wasn't So

DURBAN, South Africa, Aug. 22 (UP)—A racehorse named Fireproof perished in a blazing freight car today while en route to a Durban meet.

Full-Time Hoop Coach Plan at Port Alberni

PORT ALBERNI — Alberni Athletic Basketball Club is sponsoring a booster rally next week when citizens of the twin cities and the surrounding district will be asked to co-operate in a plan to provide a salaried coach for amateur basketball here.

The Athletics have been runners-up for the provincial championship three times in recent years. Funds raised through senior "A" games have financed a wide program of junior basketball with hundreds of local children receiving training under the sponsorship of the Athletics on teams ranging from biddy to senior.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY

The club now feels that expenditure would be warranted to employ a coach who would be on duty from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., supervising the coaching of young players after school and handling the senior team in the evenings.

The fact that Alberni Athletic playing-coach Harry Kermode has been transferred from the district contributed to the decision to try for a professional coach for the district's leading sport.

A contribution of $1,000 has been received from MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. and prompted the executive to go ahead with the plan.

All residents of the valley are urged to attend a rally scheduled for Tuesday night. They will be asked for opinions and suggestions in regard to the plan.

Hockey Loses One of Famed 'Silver Seven'

OTTAWA (CP)—Alf Smith, one of hockey's famed "Silver Seven," died Friday night in hospital. He was 75.

He also played for and coached Ottawa lacrosse and football teams. For several years, he was Ottawa Rough Riders' quarterback.

Smith was a member of the first Ottawa team to perform in organized hockey. That was in 1890-91 in the Ontario Hockey Association.

Smith played on the Silver Seven team which successfully repelled the Stanley Cup bid by a squad from Dawson City, Y.T., in 1904-05. Ottawa won the first game of the two-game, total-goals series 9-2, then swamped Dawson 23-2 in the second encounter. The late Frank McGee contributed 13 goals in the rout.

Walls Leaves For Return Go

EDMONTON (CP) — Earl Walls, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion, has left Edmonton for Salt Lake City, where he is scheduled to meet Rex Layne in a rematch September 8, promoter Jack Berry said Friday.

Walls knocked out the Utah battler in their first match here July 3. Layne hit the deck for the long count within the first two minutes of the first round.

Take Cross Cup

Tommy Campbell and Mrs. A. Donald of the Burnside Lawn Bowling Club won the Cross Cup mixed doubles competition at Burnside Wednesday night, by defeating Colin Gibson and Mrs. L. Passmore, in the final.

B.C. Youngster Canadian Junior Champ

KANAWAKI GOLF CLUB, Montreal (CP) — Gordon MacKenzie of Vancouver won the Canadian junior golf championship Saturday with a 36-hole score of 152.

The 17-year-old Quilchena club golfer finished with a two-stroke lead over Dave Pemberton-Smith of Montreal and Ted Homeniuk of Yorkton, Sask., tied with 154.

The other provincial junior champions competing for the national crown won last year by Lea Windsor of Halifax were: Jackie McMahon, Alberta, 155; Allan Patterson, Manitoba, 157; Paul Treguno, Noca Scotia, 173.

There were only six finishers of the eight starters. Bill Bell of Ontario picked up after 16 holes of the morning round because he was disgusted with his play. Doug Lewis of New Brunswick - Prince Edward Island was disqualified because he was late reporting to the starting tee for the afternoon round.

A golf tournament was played this last week that cuts deeply into the traditions of America's ancient green. For Chick Evans was not one of the players and Chick goes back in the golf lore of this nation for more than 30 years. It was the first western amateur he had missed for nearly half a century.

I recal following a tournament over Tennessee turf where Evans was the winning competitor around 1908, a matter of some 45 years ago. He is now 63, still playing in the low 70s and still battling for the western crown which he once won four years in succession, 1920 through 1923.

The three were Walter J. Travis, Jerry Travers and Evans. They were the forerunners of a fast pack that later included Bob Gardner, Francis Ouimet, Bobby Jones, Lawson Little and Johnny Goodman. Goodman was the last amateur to win the National Open championship, in 1933—just 20 years ago.

Before that date, the amateurs who also won the Open were Ouimet, Travers, Evans, Jones and Goodman. But there has been a big drop in the class of amateur golf since 1933.

For one reason, a good many of the better amateurs have turned pro, though the better ones, such as Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Mac Smith, Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan and others always were pros. Cary Middlecoff and, I think, Julius Boros were amateurs who turned pro and then won the Open.

WEAK PUTTER

Chick Evans certainly was one of the soundest golfers the game ever has known. He was great up to the green. He could not be depended upon to hole even a two-foot putt. When he putted well, he usually won. Accustomed to the much slower greens of the Midwest, he frequently used a midiron on the putting greens in the East.

He had Bill Fownes two down and three to play in the final of the amateur championship, played at Brookline. Using a midiron he three-putted the last three greens to lose the title.

I saw him fail to qualify at Merion by missing an eight-inch putt. He took three putts from eight feet away.

Chick won the amateur crown twice, the open once and the Western many times. If he had been as good a putter as Jones, Travers, Travis, Hagen, Horton Smith or Hogan, I believe he would have won at least five more championships.

What has happened to the standard of amateur golf? There is no one today, except Frank Stranahan, in medal play who can finish anywhere near the leaders of an open. There also is no amateur who is even a standout.

I recall before 1930, when we had Bob Jones, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans and George von Elm in one field. Today amateurs win a title and vanish.

NO STANDOUTS

If you asked any well-known golfer to name the five amateur leaders today—or the three leaders or the two leaders, he couldn't come up with the answer. There are no leaders, just an average lot, scoring only a trifle better than the women do.

Perhaps that proves no professionalism remains and that all concerned are really amateurs. For that matter the USGA has been about the only organization that has kept the amateur on the Simon-pure path.

The British are worse than we are in class. The days of John Ball, Harold Hilton, Willie Hunter, etc., are over. The Walker Cup matches now are a pleasant and social frolic, but the competition is missing.

Two Days Too Soon

What a waste of good fish, says Lorne Heglin who boated this 36-pound silver-button fish Friday. Heglin wishes he had saved this one for today's ladder derby fish-off. Heglin hooked salmon just in front of the island at the Goldstream end. He was using a blue herring scale Lucky Louie plug with 250 feet of wire line and planer.

Fishing Not Too Good In Two Other Finals

BY DOUG PEDEN

Somewhere, as this is being written, there is a salmon swimming in or near the waters of Saanich Inlet that will be the special target of more than 500 anglers today.

That special fish is the one that is going to bring one of the 515 qualifiers in the third annual Victoria Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association ladder derby the first prize of an 18-foot Ozarka cabin cruiser in today's final fish-off.

Just how big the winning fish will be is anybody's guess but it won't be as big as some that got away. However, from the size of the salmon being taken at the inlet this year, it is liable to go better than 30 pounds although big fish have been hard to find in the two previous finals, only three reaching the 20-pound mark each time.

PREVIOUS WINNERS

Frank Wratten won a new car when he led approximately 350 derby finalists in 1951 with a 23½-pound spring he caught on a Rex Field plub at Cole Bay.

A 21-pound, 13-ounce fish, taken on a No. 7 Wonder spoon in front of Misery Bay, earned Jim Tang a Chris-Craft cabin cruiser in last year's final. Both will be trying again this year.

Only four fish tipping the scales at better than 12 pounds were weighed in by the 400 anglers qualified for last year's event while, in the first derby, eight catches were above that mark.

Frank Shaw, an early leader last year with a 20-pound 10-ounce catch, took home an eight-cubic-foot electric refrigerator for a second-place finish. Jim McMillan reeled in a 20-pounder to win the third prize of a combination radio and, appropriately enough, a woman angler won an electric washing machine up for fourth prize. Sophie Heglin taking the award with an 18¼-pound salmon. An electric food mixer, up as a hidden-weight prize, was won by W. Denis.

M. Cave finished behind Wratten in 1951 with a 22½-pounder and A. H. Lore was third with the third button fish of the day a 22¼-pound specimen. Henry Mark took fourth with a 19¾-pounder while H. S. Reynolds finished fifth with a fish that weighed an even 18 pounds.

Others to weigh in fish above 12 pounds in the initial derby final were June Mayer, 16¼; W. Nelson, 16, and G. McLaughlin, 12¼ pounds.

BETTER THIS YEAR

An indication of the improved fishing this summer is shown by the fact that 6½-pounders were the smallest salmon to earn qualifying berths. Nine anglers in the seventh weekly competition and two fortunate fishermen in the second week made it with 6½-pound fish.

In 1952 several contestants reached the fish-off with catches of less than four pounds and the fish that placed Wratten in the first final was a 4½-pounder. More than 50 of today's finalists gained their berths with button-sized fish and three of them weighed in silver-button catches of more than 30 pounds. Several other salmon going more than 20 pounds were entered for weekly prizes by anglers already qualified.

TOP PRIZES

Today's contestants will be competing for the finest array of prizes yet offered in the annual event with the top fishermen due to receive their awards at the Anchorage Boathouse, Brentwood, during ceremonies which are due to start at 5 p.m.

In addition to the coveted cabin cruiser which goes to the derby winner, a 14-foot inboard boat will be presented to the captor of the second-heaviest salmon and the third-place [illegible] will receive an electric refrigerator. Fourth on the prize list is a desk-model sewing machine and fifth is a combination radio. Sixth is a portable radio, seventh an alarm-clock radio and eighth an electric roasting oven.

Anglers weighing in prizes too small to qualify for fishing prizes will have a chance to win three hidden-weight prizes, an electric food mixer, an electric waffle iron and an electric skillet.

Next games, Saturday: Oak Bay vs. Five C's at Windsor Park; Incogs vs. Alcos at University School.

Albions lengthened their first-place margin in Victoria and District Cricket Association standings by defeating Alcos, 156-93, at Windsor Park Saturday afternoon.

CELEBRATION

Batting first, the Albions reached their total for the loss of only four wickets. Bob Mainwaring, celebrating the birth of his third child, and first son, set the pace with 50 runs not out. Eric Gledden batted up 38 and D. Wilkinson added 36.

Denny Hendra took seven of the losers' wickets for 36 runs with only R. Wilkinson, 44 not out, and Doug Day, 17, reaching double figures against Albions' bowling.

Five Cs scored their second win of the season, and their second in a row, as they upset the second-place Incogs at University School grounds.

BRILLIANT ATTACK

Although George Payne, 21, Tom McKeachie, 15, and C. Pugh, 12, reached double figures, the Five Cs could only manage 70 runs. It proved to be enough as the bowling of Jim Richards, six wickets for 20 runs, and Payne, four for 12, quickly dismissed the Incogs' batters for 48 runs.

A fine 78 not out by John Frederick, and deadly bowling by Bob Moffatt led Cowichan Cricket Club to a 178-60 triumph over Oak Bay at Duncan.

CALGARY (CP)—Few sports remain for man alone, and the latest one to be invaded by the "petticoats" is boxing. To make matters worse, a member of the male species is promoting the scheme right here in Calgary.

The "traitor" is Walter Sherburn, of Lethbridge, who plans to organize the "Calgary Ladies' Boxing Club" here next month. Membership will be open to women from 21 to 35 years. The membership fee will be 50 cents a week with one or two lessons given during that time.

Boxing gloves "pillow-size" are on order and two instructors have been obtained.

Hunting Topic For Meeting

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will hold its August meeting at the Goldstream clubhouse on Monday, starting at 8 p.m. The session will deal largely with matters pertaining to the coming hunting season with particular emphasis being placed on the pheasant-hunting situation in Saanich and its farmer-hunter relations.

Anyone interested is invited to attend and present their views on the Saanich situation. Moving pictures will follow the meeting.

Jim Tabor Dies

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UP)—Jim Tabor, former major league and Pacific Coast League baseball star, died in the Sacramento County Hospital. He was 37.

Tabor, always a controversial figure with the fans, held a major league record for hitting two bases-loaded home runs in one day. He played with the Boston Red Sox and the Philadelphia Phillies in the majors.

Uplands Draw

3.07 p.m.—W. McColl, M. Creaser, P. Clarkson.
3.21 p.m.—I. L. Bagle, A. Smith, W. Gosling, D. Ringstad.

New Putter Working As Ford Ties Record

MONTREAL (CP)—Doug Ford of Harrison, N.Y., shot into the lead of the $25,000 open golf championship Saturday with a record-equalling third-round 64 and a 54-hole total of 200.

Four strokes behind the pace going into the day's 18, the big dairk-haired American charged past Jerry Barber of La Canada, Calif., leader after 36 holes with his six-under-par round. Barber, who set the course record with a 64 in the opening round Thursday, ballooned to an even-par 70 Saturday for a 202-total and second place to Ford.

HUOT STAYS CLOSE

Four players were tied at 203. They were Tommy Bolt of Maplewood, New Jersey, who came in with a 68 after his tremendous 64 Friday; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Ardmore, Okla., who shot a 67; Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., and Jules Huot, Montreal, each with 69.

Gardner Dickinson of Panama City, Fla., came out of nowhere to share the next spot with Walter Burkemo of Franklin, Mich. Dickinson added a five-under-par 65 to his 36-hole total of 139 and Burkemo, dark-horse winner of the U.S. professional-Golfers' Association title this year, carded a 67.

There was a seven-way tie at 205. In this group were Jim Ferrier, San Francisco, with a 67; Dave Douglas, Newark, Delaware, 66; Ted Rhodes, Chicago, 68; Marty Furgol, Lemont, Ill., 67; John Knight, Honolulu, 67; Jack Burke, Jr., Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., 72, and Max Evans, Detroit, 70.

Burke, a favorite with the crowd, was in second place going into Saturday's 18 but his two-over-par 72 sent him skidding.

GOOD REPLACEMENT

Ford, who broke his putter after a second-round 69 Friday, had its replacement working like magic Saturday and was heading for an all-time record of 62 at the end of the 16th but a double bogey on the 445-yard par four 17th stopped him dead. His drive went into a creek at the right of the fairway, forcing him to take a stroke penalty. His third shot was short of the green, he chipped and two-putted. He parred the 390-yard 18th.

He sank a 20-foot putt on the ninth and a 10-footer on the 10th. He got eight birdies—five on the first nine and three on the trip home.

His 64 came in on top of a big par-busting day over the wide-open 6,515-yard course.

SOCCER PRACTICES

Shepherd Dairy's Division IV and Division V soccer teams will hold a workout at Hollywood Park Thursday night at 6 p.m. All last year's players and others interested are urged to attend.

Aussie Doubles Win Brightens Cup Hopes

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UP)—Hopes for an all-American final in the national doubles tennis championship were shattered Saturday as first-ranked Vic Seixas and Tony Trabert were upset by Australia's Mervyn Rose and Rex Hartwig, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 8-6.

By knocking out the Wimbledon champion from Philadelphia and the husky Cincinnati, O., star, the second-seeded Aussies qualified for a final test tomorrow against second-seeded Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., and Billy Talbert of New York.

The victors and vanquished took turns at brilliant tennis, but the Aussies' superior volleying and Hartwig's unbroken service told the story.

The other semi-final victors, 39-year-old Mulloy and 36-year-old Talbert, had a somewhat similar easy time defeating the fourth-ranked Americans, Straight Clark and Hal Burrows, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

The women's division moved ahead pretty much as expected as the second-ranked domestic combine of Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Mrs. Margaret Osborne Du Pont of Wilmington, Del., routed British Wightman Cuppers Helen Fletcher and Jean Rinkel-Quertier, 6-2, 6-1.

Seattle Club Gets Matches

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle's Broadmoor Golf Club announced Thursday it had been awarded the 1954 Western Amateur golf championships, with tentative dates of July 19-25.

Vancouver Seeks Coronation Seats

VANCOUVER (CP)—Chances of obtaining bleacher seats used in London at the Coronation are being explored in the hope of cutting costs of a stadium for the British Empire Games here next July.

Alderman Halford Wilson, chairman of the joint stadium committee, Friday said enquiries have been sent to London to find whether the games society can rent or buy the seats at less money than those available in Canada.

The move is the latest in a series of attempts to overcome a $465,000 deficit in stadium funds that threatens to block construction plans.

Remember When:

Helen Wills Moody won her sixth United States women's tennis championship 24 years ago tomorrow at Forest Hills, defeating Mrs. Phoebe Watson of England 6-4, 6-2. She won the title again in 1931 but in 1933, facing apparent defeat and near collapse, she conceded victory to Helen Jacobs.

Record Producer Capped in Alberta

In a scenic setting of mountains surrounding Waterton Lakes National Park, near Lethbridge, Alta, is the Bruder No. 1 well in the Pincher Creek wet gas field. Completed to a depth of 12,415 feet, the well came in with a record flow of 168,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas a day. The bottom-hole pressure is 4,950 pounds a square inch and, as gas flowed from the well and the tremendous force released the countryside trembled. This well now has been capped waiting provincial authorization for the export of gas.—(CP photo.)

Alberta Oil Channeled For Pipeline

EDMONTON (CP)—Alberta crude oil valued at more than $[illegible] now is being channeled [illegible] for the Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company's 718-mile line, now nearing completion between here and the west coast.

More than [illegible] barrels of crude are in storage at Trans Mountain's tank farm in the refinery area of Edmonton. [illegible] farm and pump station there are in the final stages of construction.

Pipe has been tested between Edmonton and Pembina River, a distance of [illegible] miles. The stretch between Pembina River and Hinton, another [illegible] miles, will be ready for testing within a week. When that is done all the line in Alberta will be ready for use.

Redwater Pressure Maintained

Oil Field Due for Big Drink of Water

REDWATER, Alta. (CP)—The Redwater field, Canada's largest oil-producing area 40 miles northeast of Edmonton, is due for a long drink of water.

The 24 operators in the [illegible] square mile field are planning to unitize the region and to pressurize it by a water injection program. Millions of barrels of water from [illegible] wells would be [illegible] to the oil wells by a network of gathering lines and pumped beneath the prairie [illegible] to keep the oil moving up.

More than 900 wells have produced about [illegible] barrels of oil since Redwater was discovered in October, 1948. With all that oil taken out of the ground and water comes with it, something has to be put back to maintain pressure at the bottom of the wells.

The bottom-hole pressure at Redwater now is about 800 pounds per square inch. The danger point—when pressure of gas in solution in the oil stops bringing it to the surface—is some 600 pounds per square inch. Originally, the pressure was 1,050.

About $[illegible] has been spent [illegible] purposes [illegible] other equipment required for repressurizing.

The [illegible] step is [illegible] treating the field as a single unit with a [illegible] allowable production rate under conservation principles. This has been agreed upon by the operators but there still is disagreement on the exact method to be applied.

Among the benefits from such a program would be a faster return on investment due to a larger production quota and an ultimate 20 per cent increase in actual oil recovery.

Experts estimate that when a water injection program is carried out the daily average production at Redwater may be increased two or three times [illegible] allowable rates will have to be [illegible] per cent [illegible] the best [illegible] practices.

Big Fair at Cobble Hill

COBBLE HILL — Premier W. A. C. Bennett will open the 44th annual fall fair at Cobble Hill, sponsored by the Cobble Hill Farmers' Institute and Agricultural Society. The event will take place September 9 and no effort is being spared to make it the biggest yet.

Arrangements are in the hands of farmers' institute president S. Wallace; A. R. Simpson, vice-president; Miss Mona Melrose, secretary-treasurer, and directors S. D. Dougan, William Wilkinson, J. W. Black and J. W. Askham.

Named to judge the various classes are F. W. White, vegetables; B. Young, field produce; A. Littler, fruit; Miss Blatchford, domestic science; Miss B. Palmer and Mrs. Sheridan Rice, flowers; Harold Brooks, registered Jersey cattle and [illegible] work; H. Pope, poultry, pets and turkeys; [illegible] J. B. Edwards, sheep, swine and grade cattle. Judges for other classes have not yet been named.

General Weather Predictions For 50 Years Ahead Possible

BY THOMAS R. HENRY

WASHINGTON (NANA) — General weather predictions for as much as 50 years in advance can be made on the basis of periodic variations in the heat of the sun.

This conclusion is advanced by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, former secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and one of the world's foremost authorities on solar radiation.

In a publication just issued by the institution, Dr. Abbot sums up observations and conclusions of more than half a century on relations between terrestrial weather and solar changes.

THRESHOLD JUST CROSSED

Even after 50 years of observations, some of them among the most delicate ever made by astronomers, the threshold of this system of meteorology has just been crossed, Dr. Abbot says. Broad general predictions can be made, but only in a few special cases can weather be forecast accurately from day to day.

The future depends on arriving at greater and greater specificity through gathering of all sorts of weather [illegible] correlated with solar changes.

Predictions made by Dr. Abbot for months and even years in advance yield correlation coefficients with observed weather [illegible] correlation coefficients. This [illegible] insists proves that a definite relation between the sun and the weather must exist, even if it cannot be adequately explained.

BASE MEASURE

This is the amount of heat which would be absorbed by a black disc suspended at the extreme outer limit of the earth's atmosphere. It averages 1.94 calories per square centimeter per minute.

It is impossible to measure this directly. There is a vast amount of [illegible] water vapor and so forth above even the highest, driest mountain top anywhere in the world where observations can be made.

Adequate allowances, however, can be made for this heat absorption. Smithsonian astrophysicists have measured this solar constant nearly every day for 30 years.

It varies from day to day and year to year, sometimes it goes as high as 1.95, sometimes sinks as low as 1.94. That is, it is subject to a variation of 1 per cent in either direction.

It follows from this that the heat energy coming from the sun varies. There is no absorbing material that need be considered in the space between the sun's surface and the top of the atmosphere.

VARIABLE STAR

That is, the sun is a variable star [illegible]

When he analyzes these data [illegible] Dr. Abbot finds that they are not haphazard but follow rhythms and rhythms within rhythms, like the tides or like the temperate zone year with its seasons eternally repeating themselves.

The major cycle, it might be called the solar constant year, is a period of 22¾ terrestrial years. During this period the [illegible] then back again.

[illegible]

The solar relation variation is extremely small. If it fell [illegible] on the earth's surface with no interference, a fairly good thermometer would be required to detect temperature changes.

Many other factors in the atmosphere produce known effects of much greater magnitude. This has led some meteorologists to question whether the solar constant variation is a factor in weather at all, or if it is, whether it can be evaluated.

After studies extending over the greater part of a lifetime, however, Dr. Abbot finds correlations which he believes to be indisputable between the solar changes and certain directly observable aspects of weather, especially temperature and rainfall.

These also follow the ups and downs of the 22¾-year solar cycle and the ups and downs of all the included cycles. Dr. Abbot does not attempt to give an adequate theory for this.

Data still are far from adequate to formulate such a theory. The whole subject must be considered from an almost purely empirical basis for the present.

By and large Dr. Abbot holds this year's weather was repeating itself so far as general trends are concerned in 1976. This has been, for example, an extraordinarily dry spring and summer in the southwest.

The spring and summer of 1976 will probably be drier than normal in that area, though there will not necessarily be a drought as bad as the one this year.

Predictions, Dr. Abbot warns, must be more or less conditioned in every locality to the local situation at the time. The trigger action is weak and far away.

POSSIBILITIES PROVED

The results will be delayed or perhaps even reversed for a time by irregularities in the ways of winds, heat-radiating and smoke-belching cities in the middle of prairies and innumerable other factors. But Dr. Abbot stresses, solar possibilities already have proved themselves.

Cure for Bare Spots in Lawn

By DOUGLAS TUOMEY

ANYONE who has labored over the lawn and grounds about his house is familiar with those irritating bare spots. For some unaccountable reason there seem to be certain places in a lawn which just will not grow grass. Owners have dug up, raked, fertilized and reseeded these annoying patches for one season after another without ever getting decent results. [illegible] what he says. They meet him with a cynical stare assuming that as a crafty guide he is trying to mislead them.

Actually, Tyee fishermen should never use more than 30 to 60 feet of line and four ounces of weight. The water is so shallow and the boats are so numerous that any more line and weight would mean bottom or a tangle.

A bar runs off the mouth of the river. To be able to fish the Tyee grounds effectively, Dunc says, the guide must go out for himself and see where the bar is. It shifts sometimes. At low tide he lines up a tree on one shore with a tree on the other to give himself a course to steer. When the bar takes a bend he lines up two other trees and remembers them.

Then at a lower tide he is able to locate the bar where the fish are lying.

When a man is fishing for Tyees he isn't fishing for anything else. The large size of the lure alone usually precludes the possibility of any smaller fish taking it. One of the lures Dunc Marshall recommends is the Gandhi, a large curved brass or silver spoon with a wing at one end. To keep this lure rocking gently the man at the oars must row at just the right speed.

SKILL NEEDED

A lot depends upon the skill of the man at the oars who is the guide. If, for instance, he is pulling against the tide he must not row too fast for fear of speeding the action of the lure. He may actually have to pull gently and let the boat slip slowly backward so that the lure works at fish-catching speed. At the same time he has to stay in the area where the fish are.

Ode to a Bowler Hat

By NATHANIEL GUBBINS

HUMOR

TO a holiday-maker in a bowler hat sitting opposite the Sea Nest on the hottest day of the summer [illegible] so far.

There on the seat by the sea he sat
While the sun beat down on his bowler hat
While the sun beat [illegible] beat down, beat down
On the [illegible] town
While the golden [illegible] golden [illegible]
And golden [illegible] laughed [illegible] him
While the seagulls [illegible] around his hat

Dressed in a pin-striped suit [illegible]
While ships sailed by, sailed by, sailed by
To the Argentine and Uruguay
While the boats came in and the boats went out
And the girls in the swim suits squeal and shout
He sat on the seat in his bowler hat
While the seagulls laughed "Heh-heh," like that.

Little old man in a bowler hat
Why, oh why, are you dressed like that?
While the sun beats down, beats down, beats down
On the pin-striped suit that was made for town
On the white-wing collar and neat cravat
On the dusty crown of your bowler hat.

While the ships of the world go sailing by
Why are you dressed like that, oh why?
In your pin-striped suit and your bowler hat
No wonder the seagulls laugh like that.

GIRL'S BEST FRIEND

"A week of my fortnight's holiday by the sea is over and I haven't met a boy friend yet. How am I to find one without making myself cheap?" — desperate [illegible] writing to an editor.

Well, dear, as this editor is probably busy with other matters, let me help you.

At one time a modest girl anxious for a seaside friendship would take an elderly aunt around, holding her arm, asking about her rheumatism and shouting "You poor darling" in a piercing voice in the hope that eligible young men would overhear the remark and think "There's a sweet unselfish girl looking after her old aunt when she might be enjoying herself. I must make her acquaintance."

Other girls would borrow an old man in an invalid chair and push him along the front despite his protests that he was being kidnapped. When a young man shouted for the police she would explain that her [illegible] uncle was suffering from a nervous breakdown and was unable to recognize those who were sacrificing themselves for his comfort.

* * *

But as the young men of today have little use for sweet unselfish girls with [illegible] aunts and half-mad uncles, I think a girl's best friend is a doggie.

If you don't own a doggie you must borrow one. There are plenty of lost doggies at [illegible] police stations in [illegible].

And if I were you I [illegible] choose a large doggie, [illegible] big as a house [illegible] ally more friendly than [illegible] yapping doggies.

You [illegible] buy a [illegible] and allow this [illegible] drag [illegible] the front [illegible] frightened as the [illegible] the curls [illegible] wide [illegible] straight [illegible] eyes [illegible] your eyes are blue and the sun is shining.

* * *

When the right young man approaches [illegible] from your tiny weak hands. Then the doggie will [illegible] the young man put his [illegible] on his shoulders and [illegible] his face [illegible].

If the young man is a [illegible] lover and [illegible] to be [illegible] enough this [illegible] a friendship which will end in wedding bells.

If the young man is not a dog-lover I'm afraid you've [illegible] dear. But you won't [illegible] much because as you know [illegible].

Helicopters, Channel Wings Achieve Same Result

The [illegible] channel wing aircraft (top) is designed to land and take off on comparatively small runways. In its maiden flight at Oxnard, Calif., the two-ton plane got into the air after a run of less than 100 feet. It landed after the flight with power off at less than 40 miles an hour. Observers called the performance "terrific." British engineers, striving for aircraft that will operate on equally short runways, produced the Fairey Rotodyne, above, a helicopter powered by two propeller turbines and designed to carry 40-50 passengers. This is expected to be the inter-city bus of the future.

HISTORY OF AVIATION—2

Gen. Mitchell Spurted Growth Of War Flying and Then Lost Job

America has produced 180,000 planes since the birth of flight. Gen. Billy Mitchell's rebellion over mossbackism in the army in the early twenties helped revolutionize military thinking and opened a new vista for air power. This is the second in a series of six articles written by an authority in the field of aviation dealing with the fiftieth anniversary of powered flight.

By J. WILLIAMS ANDREWS
North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK. The air force's air materiel command today buys enough aviation equipment annually to make it one of the world's largest single business organizations with yearly purchases exceeding the total of General Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., U.S. Steel and E. I. Du Pont De Nemours.

The tremendous growth of this organization which helped spark the aviation industry to produce 180,000 planes—an average of 26 a day over its 50-year span—can be traced in part to the dominating personality of an individualistic general who rebelled against what he described as the "dissenting" tactics of the "high brass" who opposed his theory of air power.

He was Gen. Billy Mitchell, who let the facts speak to him and not he to the facts. As a first Great War flying colonel, he despaired over mossbackism in the army. He wrote in his diary:

"The general staff is now trying to run the air service with just as much knowledge of it as a hog knows about skating."

IN FIRST WAR

He pounded the table in his talks with Gen. "Black Jack" Pershing, insisting on the reorganization of the air service. Pershing telling him his insistence would soon see him sent home.

Mitchell would answer, "If I go, you'll soon come after me."

He spotted from the air the Germans' secret withdrawal from the St. Mihiel salient, invading Pershing's staff meeting to urge that an attack be launched immediately.

The engineers demurred. "Bad weather," they said. Mitchell waited for Pershing's decision, not believing his logic could have been persuasive.

"We will attack without delay," said Pershing, and Mitchell went out to launch his 1,500-plane air attack. In two days 16,000 Germans surrendered.

When he got back to America in the spring of 1919, he found aviation in the doldrums. A sum of $640,000,000 had been appropriated for the air, but few if any battle planes had ever reached the western front.

"A colossal effort," the Morrow committee would report to President Coolidge in 1925, "a colossal industrial machine created from practically nothing."

It had been so created, but now contracts were being cancelled. It was the first postwar example of the "feast and famine" policy that has plagued air developments since the beginning.

LOOKING AHEAD

Mitchell began immediately preaching the gospel of air power. General Douhet in Italy had preached air power: The potential of the bombers for destruction of everything, including armies and navies.

Douhet had been imprisoned for his views. But Mitchell saw a chance for immediate proof. The peace treaty with Germany had specified that the German warships, the submarine U-117, the destroyer G-102, the light cruiser Frankfurt, and the 27,000-ton battleship Ostfriesland, that had weathered the Battle of Jutland, be sunk lest they be added to the American navy and upset the balance of naval power of the postwar world.

Mitchell pressed for a test of airbombs, and Congress acceded over the protests of the navy. July, 1921 was the month of the proposed sinkings.

Mitchell had trained a special corps of pilots and bombers. He had the finest bombers, the [illegible] Martins. He had the newly devised 2,000-pound bombs. He [illegible] sink the Ostfriesland.

Glenn Martin [illegible] the transport Henderson [illegible]. But the admirals on the Henderson, the generals, the senators and congressmen—most did not want to believe. If air power could sink the battleship, then the battleship was over and few are very happy over the end of an era.

DOWN SHE GOES

The bombers came [illegible] bombs [illegible] shaped objects that fell [illegible] hitting the water close to Ostfriesland.

A sigh went up from the Henderson. Ostfriesland was still there as expected. Then slowly Ostfriesland listed to port. Slowly she lifted like a huge whale. The bow came up and the watchers could see enormous gaping holes in the hull. Slowly she settled. Out of the sky in a sharp dive came Mitchell's two-seater De Havilland with its red streamer dropping till it seemed to touch the listing masts. An old admiral, it is said, laid his head down on the Henderson's rail and wept.

But the battle of air power was still [illegible].

It is interesting to [illegible] that "flying [illegible]" were [illegible] afterward [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] Lexington.

Mitchell [illegible] the battle [illegible] four major [illegible]. A united air force was [illegible] equal footing with the army and the navy. The navy [illegible] was [illegible] spent [illegible] instead [illegible] air force. Armies [illegible] necessary to air power. Antiaircraft fire is [illegible]. [illegible] however, he was preaching air power and the role of aircraft in national defense. He was partly wrong. [illegible] aircraft [illegible] the [illegible] the Liberators and flying fortresses over [illegible] and Ploesti.

AN EDUCATION

He was [illegible] army and the navy, he was [illegible] congress he was [illegible] a force [illegible] who would [illegible] in the battle and [illegible] America ready to fight the Second World War, he was [illegible] the general public. He was [illegible] what would happen at Pearl Harbor and afterward [illegible].

But few people [illegible].

There was also the age-old question, "how far shall the high brass go in muzzling rebellious underlings?"

Mitchell declared, "the conduct of affairs by the army and navy departments [illegible] has been so disgusting in the last few years as to make any self-respecting person ashamed of the clothes he wears." He said many other things.

He was exiled to Texas not aware he had a considerable victory in his pocket.

The famous Morrow Board which brought order out of aviation chaos was appointed only a few days after he most drastic attack.

The Morrow Board would [illegible].

A [illegible] up the whole sky. But [illegible] Mitchell [illegible] who let facts speak to him and not he to facts left a permanent trace in the 50-year story of aviation.

The first newspaper published on Cape Cod was the Nautical Intelligencer. Its first issue was dated Nov. 21, 1823.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"UPSIDE DOWN"

Froissart, the French chronicler writing at the turn of the 14th century, tells how a certain knight lost the sight of an eye in a hunting accident, that is, by the rebound of the weapon he aimed at a bart in the forest.

"The stroke was rude," he writes, "and entered into his brain, the which stroke grieved him so sore that he overthrew to the earth and turned for pain 3 times upsedowne."

The "upsedowne" as spelled by the translator defines itself in our own current form of "upside-down," about which our correspondent inquires. Previously it was [illegible] and we find it in this form in the writings of John Wycliff himself a contemporary of the French chronicler. By Elizabethan times it had become "upsidown" with less logic, it would seem, than the earlier "up so down," which came before it, or the nice obviously "upside down" of the present day.

What's Next for Formosa

Now that the Korean truce is a reality, what is going to happen to Formosa. Associated Press Bureau Chief answers the question.

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG (AP)—Formosa's future is complicated by the same set of differences that caused all the trouble over the Korean truce.

Chiang Kai-Shek, like Syngman Rhee, wants to win a war. The United Nations wants a political settlement. Chiang, like Rhee, wants a U.S. commitment to help him with his war [illegible]. Chiang has powerful [illegible] in [illegible] who feel [illegible] was the [illegible] of America. And Chiang has been [illegible].

[illegible] against [illegible] three years [illegible] passed [illegible] had [illegible] continental [illegible] in American [illegible] feeling [illegible] recognition.

DEFENSE AREA

Adlai Stevenson, after visiting Formosa this summer, said Formosa must be preserved as a defense area.

That statement [illegible] between what Chiang wants and what Western leaders [illegible] the [illegible] Chiang views Formosa as a [illegible] China. As a springboard it endangers the Korean peace and holds the threat of a third world war.

One of Chiang's senior officers recently told Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa that a truce in Korea might be a "blessing in disguise. The Communists will violate it and then the United Nations [illegible] have [illegible] to carry the war beyond the Yalu."

Foreign Minister George Yeh, in a [illegible] of the Korean truce [illegible] in the [illegible]. Heavy [illegible] and landing on the mainland could be made without shattering a Korean truce [illegible] left to Western diplomats.

Any Korean settlement [illegible] and bring up the [illegible] for Peiping [illegible] American [illegible] say [illegible] suppose that [illegible] of the [illegible] European [illegible] of the Korean truce and the [illegible] of more American [illegible] Formosa."

CHIANG'S STATUS

[illegible] has been suggested Peiping be admitted to the UN as the government of China and that Chiang's seat be reduced to the Island of Formosa. That would bring howls of protest because if there is one thing the Nationalists [illegible] and military don't want it is to become an island nation. [illegible] has been [illegible] they aren't [illegible] They want to go back to China.

Formosa [illegible] trained forces of about half a million men which two years ago the U.S. began assisting in training and equipment.

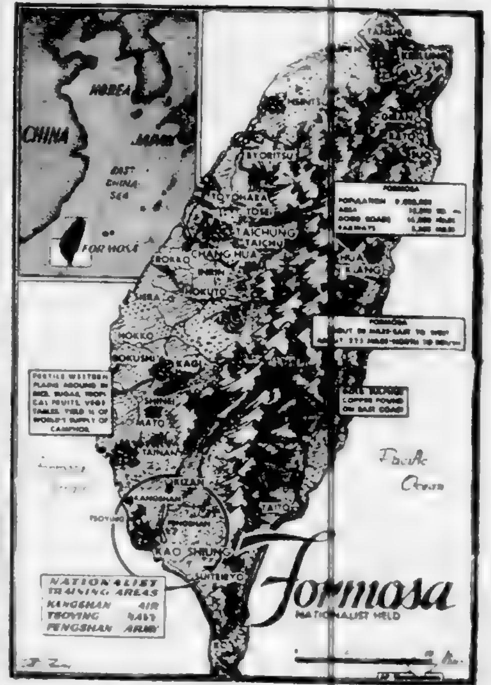

The U.S. military aid program is well advanced even jet fighters are being supplied. It is supposed to be only for defense but during its two years the announced intent of Chiang has changed from defense to offense. He is already raiding islands held by the Reds. An American officer, commenting on the question of defense or offense, said: "We train them [illegible] but what they do after that we wouldn't know."

COUNTER PLANS

What are the chances of counter-invasion succeeding?

His forces would seem to be big enough to land and establish a [illegible] would be [illegible] from the Red [illegible] The [illegible] would the [illegible] with [illegible] resistance or would they remain passive until the Reds brought big forces to the area and [illegible] them away?

The [illegible] for counter-invasion this spring seemed good—with the Red armies heavily involved in the north, with the country tired from several special war cost collections and violent "reforms" with many farmers in a mood for resistance because of farm reform [illegible] with a poor food crop [illegible]. Many thought Chiang would make his move and get a fingerhold on the mainland where he could strengthen his claim to sovereignty. But he didn't and there are some suspicions among [illegible] that he is reverting to old habits of staking his future on his American backers rather than on an all-out gamble on the resourcefulness and determination of himself and his armies. He would have had, it is true, only an outside chance of success, but few think he will ever have any more than that.

Newest Dress Stylings For College or Career

Story of Annapurna

By MAURICE HERZOG

CHAPTER 7

AN astonishing sight greeted me next morning. Lachenal and Rebuffat were sitting outside on a dry rock with their eyes rivetted on Annapurna. A sudden shout brought me out of my tent.

"I've found the route" cried Lachenal.

I went up to him blinking in the glare. For the first time Annapurna was beginning to reveal its secrets. The huge north face with all its rivers of ice shone and sparkled in the light.

Never had I seen a mountain so impressive in all its proportions. It was a world both dazzling and menacing the eye as usual. There were only two of them here and we could not for once, we were not being confronted with vertical walls, jagged ridges and hanging glaciers which put an end to all hopes of climbing.

"You see," explained Lachenal, "the problem . . . is to get to that sickle-shaped glacier high up in the mountain. To reach the foot of it without danger of avalanches, we'll have to go up well over on the left."

"Why not go straight up in line with the summit skirting around the seracs and crevasses, slant over to the left to reach the sickle and from there go straight up to the top?"

But said Lachenal, "we could go straight up under the cliff and then traverse left and reach the same spot."

MAGNIFICENT WEATHER

The weather as magnificent now had the mountains looked more beautiful. Our optimism was tremendous perhaps we were overoptimistic for the gigantic scope of the face set its problems that we had never had to cope with in the Alps. And above all time was short.

If we were to succeed not a moment must be lost. The arrival of the monsoon was anounced for about June 5. We had just 12 days left. We'd have to move fast, very fast indeed.

I was haunted by this idea. To do so we would have to lengthen out the intervals between the successive camps organize a shuttle service to bring up the maximum number of loads in the minimum time acclimatize ourselves and, finally, maintain communications with the rear. This last point worried me. Our party was organized on the scale of a reconnaissance and the total supply at our disposal was only five days' food and a limited amount of equipment.

PLANS FOR CAMP

How could I possibly keep track of the thousand and one questions that buzzed around in my head" The rest of the party were all highly excited and talked noisily while the Sherpas moved about the tents of them here and we could not possibly begin operations with just these two. So the sahibs would have to set off alone and carry their own loads; in this way we should be able to get Camp 2 pitched the next day.

When I asked the others' opinions they enthusiastically agreed to make this extra effort which would save us at least two days. Adjiba would go back to the Base Camp and show the people there the way up to Camp 1, which would have to be entirely re-equipped since we were going to take everything up with us for Camp 2.

All four of us, Lachenal, Rebuffat, Terray and myself, got our things ready and filled our sacks with as much as we could possibly carry in the way of equipment food and tents, sleeping bags leaving behind only one spare pair with a few accessories which we did not need at once. We shared out the equipment, as usual, some preferred the heavier but less bulky loads, with others it was the opposite. It worked out at an average of about 45 pounds apiece.

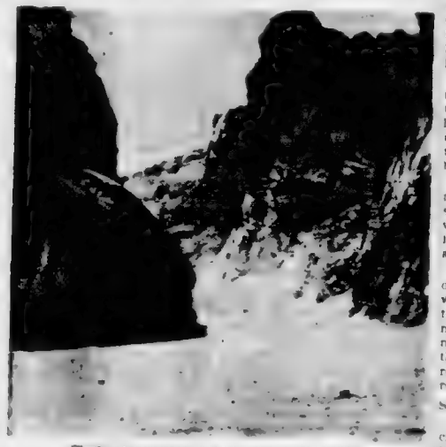

CRUSHING BURDENS

At this height whose every exertion is an effort we felt crushed beneath our burdens. The straps cut into our shoulders and it seemed a physical impossibility to walk for more than five minutes.

All the same we summoned up our last shreds of will-power and started on the long climb. Lachenal leading followed by Rebuffat, Terray and myself roped together. We had to make a detour to the left to avoid the séracs which were falling with a deafening roar. Then we turned right and began to climb straight up the slope. The snow was in good condition and we made rapid progress. Soon we were at the foot of the couloir.

SNOW BEGINS

As we went up each of us recrossed. Everything was blurred in the mist, and snow began to fall. The trail that Terray and I made by guesswork was certainly not very logical but what did it matter? All we had to do that evening was to pitch Camp 2 somewhere towards the centre of the plateau out of danger from avalanches.

First reconnaissance in the Dambush Khola

It was snowing heavily now and we took our thick capes out of our sacks. With Terray behind me I found myself in the sort of a crevasse I had been trying to avoid a few minutes ago.

As far as we could judge we had now reached the centre of the plateau. We decided to pitch the camp where we stood for that night at any rate.

In ones and twos sahibs and Sherpas arrived at the site and put down their loads. We took stock of the situation it would not be wise to let the Sherpas go back by themselves to Camp 1. So Terray was given full permission to accompany them.

AVALANCHES DEAFENING

It was late and still snowing very hard. Terray was in a hurry to leave for the traces of our ascent were already almost obliterated. He intended to bivouac at Camp 1 in Sacks sleeping-bag after sending the Sherpas on down to Base Camp, which was easy to reach. These men would then be available for carrying up more loads.

Our poor little Camp 2 was completely lost in the snow and so. We were deafened by the continuous roar of avalanches and could not determine their whereabouts for that night we would have to put up with only relative security. Amid flurries of snow and gusts of wind we got the tents up, fixed in the pegs and consolidated our platform, an hour later of level platform, an hour later we were all warm and snug inside.

Terray [illegible] down at Camp 1 was kept awake for part of the night by a violent wind. The thickly falling snow covered him up completely so he shut himself right into the canal of his sleeping-bag. After several hours he relaxed and slept the sleep of exhaustion with his head resting on the stones.

A Column for the Amateur Photographer

By FRED TANNER

In making color slides it is important that a great deal of time and effort be given to the subject of composition of your picture. Unlike a black and white picture that can be masked or cropped down to eliminate unwanted subject matter in order to improve the general appeal of the picture, color slides must be shown just the way they are taken. A badly placed subject an unwanted clothes line or telegraph pole cannot be eliminated once recorded in the slide. Therefore be sure of the subject included in the picture before you snap the shutter. Evenness of exposure is another factor which shows up on the screen which slides are projected.

* * *

For a first rate slide show it would be ideal if all the slides were evenly exposed. Thus the person viewing the slides would not be subject to constant changes in brightness on the screen. Naturally all subjects will not be identical in the lightness of darkness of the slides when given the correct amount of exposure, but extreme changes in exposure should be avoided in slide shows as it necessitates changing the control of viewing of the slides.

* * *

It is quite possible to have color prints taken from transparency color slides. They are a little more expensive than Kodacolor prints and there is a slight loss in printing. That is a certain degree of change in the colors themselves. A red may turn out a little on the pink side a yellow may show as quite white. This is quite unavoidable and it is safe to say that a good transparency will make a good print.

* * *

When we are on the subject of photography I would like to mention that there are several good books available some for as little as half a dollar others as much as seven and eight dollars. One of the best is a book by Fred Bond published "Ektachrome and Kodachrome or a set of two books by the same man entitled "How to Make Better Color Slides in Part I and II. The Kodak Company publish several small data books on color each covering specific items or techniques. These are books for the beginner and for the advanced worker as well. If we receive enough requests for them the editor will be more than pleased to have a little time to learn something about the camera and film.

Sky's-the-Limit Ballyhoo Hits Las Vegas Payrolls

BY HAROLD HEFFERNAN
North American Newspaper Alliance

GOLD dust from the desert! Day by day it is becoming more apparent that Las Vegas promoters are going all out to make their garish headquarters the most famous, most inviting of such spots in the entire world. Monte Carlo and the Riviera will look like pikers shortly if the Nevada money [illegible] continue the dizzy promotional pace they've set during the last 18 months.

Hollywood and the motion picture industry, until the present pinch, always have been looked upon as leaders in the gay sport of tossing away prodigious sums of money for salaries, picture costs and advertising, but even on its rosiest day the film town couldn't begin to match what's going on in Las Vegas.

NOW ON STAGE

Many of the bizarre and sky's-the-limit stunts to make Las Vegas internationally known have been mentioned from time to time but the latest chunk of ballyhoo just announced has the top Hollywood praise agents pop-eyed with envy. It has just been disclosed that close to half a million dollars will be spent on preparations for a pretentious musical stage revue named "Las Vegas" to be un[illegible]

Some faint idea of the money being spent up there is gained by figuring the payroll of the six leading hotels for entertainment alone during the past year. It is estimated the total tab has run to well over $6,000,000, including all-star acts such as Red Skelton ($30,000 week-ly), Betty Hutton ($25,000) and Milton Berle ($22,500). Tony Martin played the Flamingo two years ago for $5,000 a week. Now his take is $17,500.

Nature Providing Many Medicines

FAR-OFF lands and the "superstitions" of primitive tribes still are important contributors to the medicines of modern science.

Into the warehouses of huge pharmaceutical firms come not only basic chemicals to be compounded into today's exact prescriptions and drugs but also tons of strange exotic plant materials from the world around, the National Geographic Society says.

One company reports it uses 140 different types of medicinal plants. Crude drugs arrive in paper and varnish containers from the Orient and in woven baskets from the tropics. Storage bins smell like apothecary shops of old.

The science that deals with the history, collection, identification and use of drug plants is known as pharmacognosy. It is as old as medicine itself.

Priest-doctors of Assyria knew the use of several hundred plant remedies. They treated wounds with sea kelp and goiter with burnt sponge, both rich in iodine used for the same purposes today.

In the Middle Ages arose the so-called "doctrine of signatures," a belief that nature gave clues to its plant remedies for many ailments. Hepatica, for example, had liver-shaped leaves, therefore it was believed to be a liver remedy. The wa[illegible] was used as a [illegible] is a [illegible]

A Tour Through Historic Victoria

Famous Old Homes of Great Interest

BY JAMES K. NESBITT

British Columbia Historical Association Saturday marked the 100th birthday of Craigflower Farm, important in its own way as the founding of Fort Victoria in 1843.

It was the association's annual field day. Before going to Craigflower farmhouse and school, members visited some of the historic homes of Victoria and were fascinated by the splendid old chimneys, the big bay windows and gingerbread high up in the eaves. As well, they were somewhat envious of the peace and gracious ease that filled these lovely old places in a day when the world was less [illegible] when there was time for much home life and rich [illegible] before the art of conversation became a rare art and good talk was as stimulating as the old port in ruby glass, sipped before a coal fire in the library.

START OF TOUR

Members found Miss Wolfenden's Belleville Street residence of much interest. No. 419 was once the home of John Raymond [illegible] 1901 he was the proprietor of the Rosebank Lime Company.

[illegible] by A. B. Gray, James [illegible] the architect. There are marble mantels and the usual high ceilings and elaborate chandeliers. In the middle 1880s George R. Jackson, a tailor, and his family came to live in this house. Jackson gave up tailoring to study medicine. He eventually became the originator of the Roman Meal breakfast foods. [illegible] and his bride moved into this house when the Jacksons were away. It is now a guest house attached to Loretto Hall.

"No. 621 Belleville was built by Graham James Clarke, a Cariboo pioneer, probably between 1874 and 1876. Clarke and A. L. Smith [illegible] and Fort and Langley. After her husband's death in 1883 Mrs. Clark kept a boarding house for young [illegible] whom were [illegible]

Bishop's Close, once called [illegible], the home of Dr. Israel Wood Powell, father of Mr. David Doig of Victoria, were looked at and then the [illegible] historians went to Fort Street [illegible]

S. H. Matson, and "Clovelly," for years the home of Sir Frank and Lady Barnard.

RESEARCH OF VALUE

Again Miss Wolfenden's research was of much value. "Clovelly" was built in 1894 by A. M. W. Bridgman, G. J. [illegible] the architect. It is a beautiful house of half-timbered work and plaster with attractive gables. The interior [illegible] cedar paneling and [illegible]. At present it is a [illegible] home [illegible] by the sea.

The end of the tour was at Craigflower and here members enjoyed a basket picnic under the huge old maples and oaks by the shores of historic Victoria Arm, once in Victoria's history a busy waterway of commerce and pleasure. And here again members were fascinated by Miss Wolfenden's excellent paper. "The Craigflower settlement and Fort Victoria at opposite ends of 'The Arm' were two almost rival centres of activity in the 1850s.

CAME FROM SCOTLAND

"Kenneth Mackenzie and his family were brought from Scotland to Vancouver Island in 1853 to inaugurate and supervise one of the large farms for the Puget Sound Agricultural Company, a subsidiary of the Hudson's Bay Company. Gradually the land was cultivated, crops were sown and harvested, buildings [illegible] farm and dwelling and grist and sawmills [illegible] operation.

Pumphouse Added To Sewer Project

A pumphouse station for the $2,500,000 Saanich sewer project is the latest step forward in the major construction job, municipal engineer H. D. Dawson said Saturday.

The station is located at Colquitz and Gorge Roads.

Already completed, it is reported, is laying of [illegible] pipe in the 744 feet of tunnel on Albina from Obed Avenue to Gorge Park. The line there connects with Gorge Road [illegible] for eventual disposal into the city sewer system at Harriet Road.

CONNECTING LINKS

Connecting links to the tunnel are pending and when complete will serve about 1,000 homes.

The entire scheme is about 25 per cent done. When finally completed [illegible] homes will be served by the service.

[illegible] their private lines were connected.

Extensive digging of sewer ditches and pipe laying are under way over a large area in Burnside district, including some streets off Harriet Road, others on Burnside itself and in the Carey and Tillicum Roads area.

SEWER LINES LAID

In the Henson subdivision sewer lines have been laid along the streets to property lines, but actual inauguration of the scheme for these residents will have to await further connecting links with trunk lines, Mr. Dawson explained.

Ambulance Men To Have Test

—AROUND TOWN—

A convoy practice for ambulance drivers in civil defense will be held at 7.30 p.m. Monday, officials said Saturday.

The ambulance drivers will visit all the buildings that have been allocated as first aid stations. The tour will begin from the lookout on Dallas Road.

Instruction will be given in packing and general ambulance technique under direction of Mrs. R. R. [illegible] ambulance officer. Those taking part are volunteers from the Red Cross, St. John Ambulance Brigade and civil defense.

A new class in ambulance driving and stretcher bearing will begin September 11 at civil defense headquarters, Cormorant Street, it was announced Saturday.

Persons wishing to join the work may telephone B 7533 or B 1922.

Transmitter Changes Affect TV Reception

BY ROY PARRETT

KING-TV is building a new high-power station which will commence operation early this fall. The new channel five station is expected to be one of the most consistent received here.

The present KING-TV equipment has been donated to educational television in Seattle to provide educational programs on channel nine. Some of the equipment has already been moved to the University of Washington, according to Ray Tate, service manager of Wilcox Ltd., local TV firm.

Mr. Tate has been advised by J. Dutton, sales representative of DuMont Television Corporation, that the DuMont network will supply network shows to KOMO-TV Seattle, channel four, when it begins operation in about two months. The DuMont shows will also be released from KVOS-TV in Bellingham.

A one-hour documentary program reviewing the eight years of news since the end of the Second World War will be featured from KING-TV channel five Sunday at 4 p.m.

Colonist Classes Approaching End

The [illegible] Greater Victoria youngsters who [illegible] taking part in the swimming instruction are asked to attend.

PROFICIENCY TESTS

During the past week, with the exception of Tuesday, which was too rough for swimming, classes were put through proficiency tests.

"A few in each class will get a second chance at their certificates this last week," Mrs. Naysmith said on Saturday.

"There are others who have their swimmer's card who will get some diving instruction in the last week," she said. "A lot of them are eager to get diving lessons.

"Those who are now quite ready to begin diving will get further swimming instruction," Mrs. Naysmith said.

SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The chief instructor reported a most successful season and said the great majority of the [illegible] young swimmers will qualify as beginners. To pass they must be able to keep their eyes open under water, do a prone glide and recovery, and swim 25 feet.

Beginners receive a rose-colored [illegible] card of proficiency signed by Mrs. Naysmith and [illegible] Hatton, Colonist publisher.

On Saturday Mr. Hatton extended an invitation to parents wishing to see the final water tests being carried out at Happy-land, Elk Lake, next week.

Besides the beginners group, there will be another class, the swimmers, who receive a buff-colored card of qualification.

KEEP EYES OPEN

The swimmers must be able to keep their eyes open under water, do a prone glide and recovery, and swim 30 feet on their fronts and 40 feet on their backs. This group is drawn from those youngsters who could swim a little before the course began.

The large group who have become swimmers or who have been taught to respect but not fear the water during the Colonist classes will, it is believed, cut down the number of drownings in the area considerably.

There were 953 accidental drownings in B.C. between 1943 and 1952. Victoria had 32 drownings during a nine-year period from 1943 to 1951.

SKILLED INSTRUCTORS

The 450 swimmers who got their start towards safety in the water this season received their instruction under the watchful eye of Mrs. Naysmith, and their actual training from Bill Helgesen, who was a lifeguard and instructor with the Vancouver Sun-sponsored swimming classes in Nanaimo in 1952.

Archie McKinnon, well known Victoria swimming instructor and Olympic coach, acted in an advisory capacity. Harry Chapman and Charles Appleby, proprietors of Happy-land Beach, supplied all facilities and equipment required for the classes.

Little Maralee Rutley

Victoria Skater Bound for Title

The experts agree Victoria in all probability will have a champion figure skater within the next few years.

Picked for the role is 11-year-old Maralee Rutley, at present spending her summer vacation in Nelson, B.C., where she is taking lessons under Mary Rose Thacker. The little miss followed her teacher to the Interior city again this summer.

Maralee, who won't be 12 until January 23, recently passed her fourth of eight prescribed gold medal figure skating tests and she will be trying for her fifth before the summer is out.

ABILITY PROVED

Maralee has already proved her ability to perform in ice shows. For the past three years she has taken the lead part in the Victoria ice show, which sees 600 other students taking part.

Three years ago, when she was only eight, Maralee was chosen to take the leading role as Dorothy in the play the Wizard of Oz. The following year she was again the leading skater as Goldilocks in the story of the Three Bears. Last year she excelled as Alice in the fantasy Alice in Wonderland.

It all started in 1948 when six-year-old Maralee attended an outdoor skating rink in Winnipeg. She was ready to learn ice skating. Her ambition was to become a speed skater.

From that day on Maralee has progressed at a rate the experts term as exceptional. Only one thing has changed. She now intends becoming as good if not better than Barbara Ann Scott in the art of figure skating.

Maralee began her early lessons at Victoria Memorial Arena. Three times a week she had to get up at five a.m. so she could be on the ice by six. Her teacher was Lois Hardy.

Later Maralee took lessons from Marjorie McMillan, at one time a student of her present teacher, Mary Rose Thacker, who has been teaching Maralee for the past four years.

TAKES LEAD WELL

"She carries off a lead part to perfection and looks as if she's been skating for 20 years," said Miss Thacker of her pupil.

Maralee's one love is skating. She practices on the ice for five hours a day. "I'd rather skate than eat," she said recently.

Monthly meeting of the zone council of the Canadian Legion scheduled for Thursday has been cancelled. The meeting was dropped so that council members might attend a DVA meeting called the same night at the Britannia branch to explain the Children of War Dead (Education Assistance) Act.

Kerwin or Royce?—Take Your Choice

This should be Kerwin Johnson, twin brother of Royce the doorman at the Totem Theatre. Royce was the original applicant for the job, and now and then has his twin brother substitute for him. The only thing is that nobody now knows who is who. Can you guess?

If the other was Kerwin, this should be Royce. Totem Theatre cast, which approved hiring of Royce, didn't know there was another just like him at home. Patrons of Totem have been attending all week without realizing the young man at the door was someone else—or was it?

All Sidney Celebrates New Lighting System

SIDNEY—The lights went on Saturday night for 1,100 citizens here at the official inauguration of the new $5,000 [illegible] unit street lighting system.

The opening ceremonies were followed by a street dance on Beacon Avenue. Hundreds of local residents and visitors joined in the celebrations which marked the first full-fledged lighting system the village has ever had.

Fastened to existing telegraph poles, the luminaire-style lights turn on automatically at dusk and off at dawn.

They were paid for out of general tax revenue and the project is one of a series of improvements planned by the commission of the newly incorporated village.

Harold Fox, chairman of the commission, officially threw the switch. Speakers for the occasion were Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P. for Esquimalt-Saanich; John Tisdalle, MLA for Saanich; R. C. Bracewell, deputy minister of municipal affairs, and E. W. Arnott, vice-president of the B.C. Electric.

Special guest was J. J. White, Sidney's oldest resident, who came to the village in 1892.

Barber for 72 Years, Suggests Record Set

Victoria's oldest working barber believes he may have set a record and would be interested in hearing confirmation or denial of his idea.

William Beach, 82, has worked steadily as a barber for 72 years, since he was 10 years old. He would gladly give a free haircut to anyone who can prove he has been in one trade longer than 72 years.

"Doc," as he is known by all his customers, has no intention of retiring. "I would retire at once if I thought I was holding a younger man back," he said.

He began work in Accrington, England, and has clung to his English accent even though he has lived in Victoria since 1922. He came to Victoria from Australia, where he went after leaving England in 1910.

A Tour Through Historic Victoria

BY JAMES K. NESBITT

British Columbia Historical Association Saturday marked the 100th birthday of Craigflower Farm, important in its own way as the founding of Fort Victoria in 1843.

It was the association's annual field day. Before going to Craigflower farmhouse and school, members visited some of the historic homes of Victoria and were fascinated by the splendid old chimneys, the big bay windows and gingerbread high up in the eaves. As well they were somewhat envious of the peace and graciousness that filled these lovely old places in a day when the world was less rushed, when there was time for much home life and rich friendship before the art of conversation became a rare art and good talk was as stimulating as the old port in ruby glass sipped before a coal fire in the library.

START OF TOUR

Members found Miss Wolfenden's Belcomb Street [illegible] 419 was once the home of John Raymond [illegible] 1900 or 1901. He was the proprietor of the Rochan[illegible]

No. 327 was [illegible] by A. B. Gray. James [illegible] the architect. There are marble mantels and the usual high ceilings and elaborate chandeliers. In the middle 1880s George R. Jackson, a tailor, and his family came to live in this house. Jackson gave up tailoring to study medicine. He eventually became the originator of the Roman Meal breakfast foods. Gordon Hunter, later Chief Justice of B.C., and his bride moved into this house when the Jacksons went away. It is now a girls' house attached to Loretto Hall.

"No. 421 Belleville was built by Graham James Clark, a Cariboo pioneer, probably between 1874 and 1876. Clark and A. J. Smith had a [illegible] mill and sash-door factory [illegible] Fort and Langley. After her husband's death in 1884 Mrs. Clark kept a boarding house for young bachelors, among whom were [illegible] Gordon Hunter and [illegible]

OLD PENDRAY HOME

[illegible] endowed it, is a good example of colonial brick architecture and designed by Wright and Saunders. Among the school's principals were Miss Emily Crease, Miss Susan Pemberton and Miss Dupont. Became a hotel just prior to 1914.

Bishop's Close, once called "Cardale," the home of Dr. Israel Wood Powell, father of Mrs. David Doig of Victoria, was looked at and then the itinerant historians went to Fort Street hill to see "Wentworth Villa," built in the 1860s by Capt. Henry Ella, a fine example of a colonial home built on simple but dignified lines, according to Miss Wolfenden.

to the picturesque Rock Bay area, now much down at heel, and to old-world Esquimalt to see three of Victoria's most beautiful homes, the O'Reilly estate at Point Ellice Bridge, "Mount Adelaide," the stately residence of Mrs. J. S. H. Matson, and "Clovelly," for years the home of Sir Frank and Lady Barnard.

RESEARCH OF VALUE

Again Miss Wolfenden's research was of much value. "Clovelly" was built in 1894 by A. M. W. Bridgman, G. J. [illegible] the architect. It is a beautiful house in half-timbered work and plaster, with attractive gables. The interior has much cedar paneling and stained glass. At present it is a [illegible] home, St. Gregory by the sea.

"Mount Adelaide," a fine example of the designing of architect J. B. Trimen, father of Mrs. A. L. Yates, [illegible] of Victoria. It was built in 1890-91 by Henry Croft and his wife Mary Jean, daughter of Robert Dunsmuir. The house is [illegible] The dining room and hall are paneled and there is a beautiful stained glass window on the stairway.

O'REILLY HOME

"The O'Reilly home, it is delightfully old-fashioned type of rambling house, is constructed of lath and plaster [illegible] The original section was built for one of the sons of [illegible] Work, the property having formed part of the extensive Work estate. It was bought by Hon. Peter O'Reilly, whose daughter now and grandson [illegible] live there now, in 1886, and members of his family have lived in it continuously since that time.

The end of the tour was at Craigflower and here members enjoyed a basket picnic under the huge old maples and oaks by the shores of historic Victoria Arm, once in Victoria's history a busy waterway of commerce and pleasure. And here again members were illustrated by Miss Wolfenden's excellent paper. The Craigflower settlement and Fort Victoria at opposite ends of "The Arm" were two almost rival centres of activity in the 1850s.

CAME FROM SCOTLAND

Kenneth Mackenzie and his family were brought from Scotland to Vancouver Island in 1853 to inaugurate and supervise one of the large farms for the Puget Sound Agricultural Company, a subsidiary of the Hudson's Bay Company. Gradually the land was cultivated, crops were sown and harvested, buildings [illegible] farm and dwellings and grist and sawmills put into operation.

"This delightful old farm house, substantially built on [illegible] comfortable rooms and commanding a picturesque view of the waterway, is a reminder of those busy but peaceful days. Access to and from Fort Victoria was at first of necessity by boat and scow until the building of the Craigflower Road."

Mrs. J. E. Godman, chairman of historical association's Victoria section, assisted by Russell E. Potter and secretary Mrs. Kenneth Drury, were in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Godman had as her guest Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Irving of [illegible] Sussex, England.

Beauty Chosen

GILBERTE SMITH

In the first elimination contest for Miss Starlite Vancouver Island Queen, Gilberte Smith was chosen in the contest sponsored by the Starlite Drive-In Theatre, Nanaimo, and the Vancouver Island Exhibition Board.

Other eliminations will be August 26 and September 2. Finals are September 4 with the queen to be crowned at Nanaimo Fair.

Pumphouse Added To Sewer Project

A pumphouse station for the $2,500,000 Saanich sewer project is the latest construction job, municipal engineer H. D. Dawson said Saturday.

The station is located at Colquitz and Gorge Roads.

Already completed, it is reported, is laying of 18-inch pipe in the 744 feet of tunnel on Albina from Obed Avenue to Gorge Park. The one there connects with Gorge Road trunk for eventual disposal into the city sewer system at Harriet Road.

CONNECTING LINKS

Connecting links to the tunnel are pending and when complete will serve about 1,000 homes.

The entire scheme is about 25 per cent done. When finally completed more than 6,000 homes will be served by the service.

About 100 persons are using some of the system now and another 200 persons could use it if their private lines were connected.

Extensive digging of sewer ditches and pipe laying are under way over a large area in Burnside district, including some streets off Harriet Road, others on Burnside itself and in the Carey and Tillicum Roads area.

SEWER LINES LAID

In the Henson subdivision sewer lines have been laid along the streets to property lines, but actual inauguration of the scheme for those residents will have to await further connecting links with trunk lines, Mr. Dawson explained.

Concentration is placed on laying lines although connecting links may be some time yet, he said, in order that other public works may follow with [illegible] roads, sidewalks, boulevards and others.

Ambulance Men To Have Test

—AROUND TOWN—

A convoy practice for ambulance drivers in civil defense will be held at 7.30 p.m. Monday, officials said Saturday.

The ambulance drivers will visit all the buildings that have been allocated as first aid stations. The tour will begin from the lookout on Dallas Road.

Instruction will be given in parking and general ambulance technique, under direction of Mrs. B. R. Grant, ambulance officer. "Those taking part are volunteers from the Red Cross, St. John Ambulance Brigade and civil defense."

Elderly Couple Injured

An elderly couple suffered lacerations and shock Saturday when their car was in collision with National Motors delivery truck at Gordon Head and San Juan Roads.

Frank M. Ashmore, 73, of 3801 Cedar Hill Road, and his wife Edith, 60, were treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital and taken home after the collision. The delivery truck was driven by John H. P. Price, 1423 Fernwood Road.

DAMAGE $750

Greater Victoria Polio Cases 39

New Social Credit Group Organized by W. A. Scott

A new social credit group which will be called "The Voice of the People" has been started in Oak Bay by W. A. Scott.

Mr. Scott, who was "disowned" by an Oak Bay Social Credit group some weeks ago, said on Saturday that he was not expelled from the Social Credit party.

"I am basing my group most [illegible] aim and object of the Social Credit League," which says:

"To provide the people with an effective organization for obtaining information on matters essential to their welfare and for taking united action to assert their democratic will," Mr. Scott said.

FIRST MEMBERS

Two of the first members to join the new Social movement were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haigh.

"I am not interested in Harry Haigh or Florence Haigh as friends or as a cause celebre," Mr. Scott said. "I want that understood. But I am interested in them for what they could do for this city.

Transmitter Changes Affect TV Reception

BY ROY PARRETT

The present KING-TV equipment has been donated to educational institutions in Seattle to provide educational programs on channel nine. Some of the equipment has already been moved to the University of Washington, according to Ray Tate, service manager of Wilcox Ltd., local TV firm.

Mr. Tate has been advised by J. Dutton, sales representative of DuMont Television Corporation, that the DuMont network will supply network shows to KOMO-TV Seattle channel four when it begins operation in about two months. The DuMont shows will also be released from KVOS-TV in Bellingham.

A one-hour documentary program reviewing the eight years of news since the end of the Second World War will be featured from KING-TV, channel five, Sunday at 4 p.m.

Colonist Classes Approaching End

The final classes for about 450 Greater Victoria youngsters will be this week, when all children taking part in the swimming instruction are asked to attend.

"Even those with certificates are eligible for more free lessons," said Marge Naysmith, chief instructor.

PROFICIENCY TESTS

During the past week, with the exception of Thursday, which was too rough for swimming, classes were put through proficiency tests.

"A few in each class will get a second chance at their certificates this last week," Mrs. Naysmith said on Saturday.

"There are others, who have their swimmer's card, who will get some diving instruction in the last week," she said. "A lot of them are very eager to get diving lessons.

"Those who are not quite ready to begin diving will get further swimming instruction," Mrs. Naysmith said.

SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The chief instructor reported a most successful season and said the great majority of the 450 young swimmers will qualify as swimmers. To pass they must be able to keep their eyes open under water, do a prone glide and recovery, and swim 25 feet.

On Saturday Mr. Halton extended an invitation to parents wishing to see the first water tests being carried out at Happy Land, Elk Lake, next week.

Besides the beginners' group there will be another class, the "swimmers"—who receive a buff-colored card of qualification.

KEEP EYES OPEN

The swimmers must be able to keep their eyes open under water, do a prone glide and recovery and swim 40 feet on their fronts and 40 feet on their backs. This group is drawn from those youngsters who could swim a little before the course began.

The large group who have become swimmers or who have been taught to respect but not fear the water during the Colonist classes will, it is believed, cut down the number of drownings in the area considerably.

There were 933 accidental drownings in B.C. between 1943 and 1952. Victoria had 32 drownings during a nine-year period from 1943 to 1951.

SKILLED INSTRUCTORS

The 450 swimmers who got their start towards safety in the water this season received their instruction under the watchful eye of Mrs. Naysmith and their actual training from Bill Helgesen, who was a lifeguard and instructor with the Vancouver Sun-sponsored swimming classes in Nanaimo in 1952.

Archie McKinnon, well known Victoria swimming instructor and Olympic coach, acted in an advisory capacity. Harry Chapman and Charles Appleby, proprietors of Happy Land Beach, supplied all facilities and equipment required for the classes.

Little Maralee Rutley

Victoria Skater Bound for Title

The experts agree, Victoria in all probability will have a champion figure skater within the next few years.

Picked for the role is 11-year-old Maralee Rutley, at present spending her summer vacation in Nelson, B.C., where she is taking lessons under Mary Rose Thacker. The little miss followed her teacher to the Interior city again this summer.

Maralee, who won't be 12 until January 23, recently passed her fourth of eight prescribed gold medal figure skating tests and she will be trying for her fifth before the summer is out.

ABILITY PROVED

Past president of the ACWW, Mrs. Raymond Sayre of Ackworth, Iowa, said more countries were represented at this session than at any previous conference.

Since the organization was formed in Canada 30 years ago it has grown to include some 6,000,000 women in 27 countries, Mrs. Sayre said.

Mrs. Hugh Summers, president of the Federated Women's Institute of Canada, and Mrs. J. L. Cardin, president of Les Cercles de Fermieres, also spoke.

Shower Fetes Gloria Davies

Miss Gloria Davies was feted when Mrs. A. B. McNeil, Hampshire Road, entertained at a miscellaneous shower recently. Gifts were arranged on a tea wagon.

The bride-elect received a corsage of pale pink baby gladioli, and her mother, Mrs. A. H. Davies, received pale pink carnations.

Guests were Mrs. S. J. Peden, Mrs. P. [illegible], Mrs. M. Davidson, Mrs. A. Newcombe, Mrs. J. A. Bostock, Mrs. G. B. Burns, Mrs. H. Gregg, Mrs. A. Little, Mrs. G. Leeming, Misses Audrey Barnett, Maureen Little and Shirley McNew.

Exotic Begonia Blooms Draw Crowds

BY KAY McGREGOR

Pleasant, brown-haired, industrious Lucy Botten meets hundreds of visitors to Victoria during this busy tourist season, many from as far away as England and the eastern States.

With her husband William Botten she runs a begonia conservatory out on Leslie Drive near Swan Lake to which visitors drive each day to admire the masses of exotic blooms at their best just now and to ask advice on cultivation.

Working as a postman and a spare-time job with the Home [illegible] keeps her husband busy, so the daily routine at the conservatory is shouldered by Mrs. Botten who hurries through her housework in the early morning before the tourists arrive and later in the evening when the last carload has departed.

The day I visited her she was busy conducting a group from Pennsylvania through the greenhouses and out to the big flower beds nearby. Questions on the care of the flowers were answered as fast as they came as Mrs. Botten outlined the steps in developing begonias.

First she showed the electrically heated propagator, explaining that begonia seeds are so fine they must be mixed with sand and [illegible] from a shaker. Next step, she said, took place in about 10 days at [illegible] when the tiny [illegible] second transplanting [illegible] leaves and they were then potted 28 to a flat.

If Mr. Botten's [illegible]

Phyllis Jones Bride Of Vernon Simpson

Rev. Canon George Biddle heard the vows of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Jones, 1476 Finlayson Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Simpson, 2913 Austin Avenue.

Tall baskets of gladioli and [illegible] were arranged at the front of the church [illegible] with clusters of carnations by Mr. B. Davies and Mr. C. Walker.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. J. Bulinckx sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The charming bride, who entered the church on her father's arm, [illegible] studded with rhinestones and pearls and lily point sleeves over her gown. Her [illegible] veil cascaded from a high cor[illegible]

[illegible] were worn by Mrs. D. Jones, matron of honor, in green; Mrs. D. Routley, in pink, and Mrs. P. Hind, in mauve, bridesmatrons.

Receiving guests in Terry's Rose Room after the ceremony, the bride's mother wore a pink [illegible] with navy [illegible] and white accessories and corsage of pink and white carnations, while the groom's mother [illegible] navy blue gown, pink accessories and pink and white carnation corsage.

The three-tier wedding cake topped with a [illegible] bride and groom was flanked with [illegible] of [illegible]. Mr. W. [illegible] proposed the toast to the bride.

After a honeymoon [illegible] the young couple will live at 1476 Finlayson Avenue. The bride traveled in a tan suit and coat with navy blue velvet hat and purse and corsage of red rosebuds.

Lace To Be Leading Style

LONDON (CP)—Lace is expected to be one of the leading fashion materials in the coming months, boosted by the Royal Family and others.

Queen Elizabeth led the way in the lace vogue since she was painted last year in a wonderful gown of Nottingham lace. Princess Alexandra, young daughter of the Duchess of Kent, wore an exquisite lace gown at the Coronation, the design being [illegible] with the centres picked [illegible] thread.

[illegible] laces are being used for the severe but smartly tailored suit, usually with a taffeta [illegible]. Even the [illegible] laces are being given a heavier pattern.

PLAN FALL BAZAAR

The Esquimalt Women's Institute held a special meeting [illegible] the fall bazaar which is to be held October 1 in the Douglas Room of the Hudson's Bay Co. Miss Ethel Elliott is the general convener.

The regular monthly meetings will commence September 3 with the usual fortnightly card parties.

Clara Alice Fieldhouse and Ross Rickman Exchange Marriage Promises on Saturday

At a ceremony Saturday evening in St. [illegible] Church which was decorated with standard baskets of gladioli and sweet peas, Clara Alice Fieldhouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fieldhouse, 820 [illegible] and Ross Rickman, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Rickman, 620 [illegible], exchanged marriage promises.

Rev. D. [illegible] performed the ceremony [illegible]

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore [illegible] gown fashioned with [illegible] bodice of [illegible] satin and [illegible] matching [illegible] point sleeves. Her [illegible] veil of [illegible] was caught with small [illegible] coronet of [illegible]. Pearl earrings were her only jewels, and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

The 21-year-old brother, Mr. George Rickman, was best man, and the bride's brothers, Mr. George Fieldhouse and Mr. [illegible].

[illegible] and streamers decorated the [illegible] where guests were received by the bride's mother [illegible] accessories and [illegible] corsage, and the groom's mother [illegible] with [illegible] accessories and white [illegible].

SPICED CURRANTS

5 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friends, thanking Rev. McAlister for his consoling words in our sad bereavement in the loss of a loving husband and father, especially thanking the nurses of [illegible]. Mrs. A. Anderson and Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Howell wish to express their heartfelt thanks to the many friends for their kindness and sympathy after the loss of our daughter Marjorie. To the nurses of St. Joseph's Hospital and Rev. Fraser Perry of Christ Church Cathedral for their kindness and cheering words, also to Dr. Tom Miller for his untiring efforts.

I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to the many friends and neighbors for the kind sympathy, the cards and letters of sympathy and the beautiful floral tributes received during my recent sad bereavement in the loss of a beloved husband. Special thanks to Dr. John A. [illegible]. Mrs. [illegible] Ayres.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all who so kindly assisted and for the words of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings extended at the death of our beloved son and brother Dennis. Mrs. A. McGee, George, Donn and Lucy.

6 IN MEMORIAM

COLLINS—In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Abraham Collins, who passed away August 24, 1952.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Always remembered by his loving daughters, Mrs. Walters and Nellie O'Neil and families.

PATERSON—In loving memory of Mabel Paterson, who passed away August 21, 1952.

Do Animals Go To Church?

By TED ATWOOD

Goldfish and guinea pigs, rabbits and titmice! All are welcome to a front row pew on October 3 in Holy Trinity Church, Hereford, England. For that day, the feast of St. Francis, is the day of the "Blessing of the Animals." And anything that walks, flies, swims or crawls is entitled to a place in God's church and a piece of His blessing.

This ancient church custom is also observed in various parts of Switzerland, Austria, Spain, Mexico and even the United States. In Fresno, California, for example, priests of the Cathedral Garden of St. James have prayed over such unlikely worshippers as baby alligators, bees, turtles, snails, hamsters and bull frogs.

In Siena, Italy, horses are led to the altar and blessed before competing in the world's oldest horse race. Called the Palio, the meet is an exhausting three laps around the town square. Since the track has no fences, thrills are at a maximum for riders and spectators alike.

Farther north, in Austria, the men of Jesenwang will ride their heavy farm horses down the aisle this year for the 142nd time. The custom began in 1811 when an epidemic threatened to kill all the livestock, and villagers begged their priest to pray for the animals. The disease was promptly checked, and the people vowed to bless their livestock once during every year thereafter.

But the machine age may soon write an end to the picturesque Jesenwang ritual. The tiny Bavarian village now counts a mechanized population of 30 tractors, and horses are on the way out. So far, anyway, no one has wanted to invoke a blessing on a tractor.

Uncle Wiggily Story -- By Howard Garis

... entering old sea dog, came walking past ...

... hammock on her island," spoke Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes, I guess so," Bosun re-...

"And when you are sick, or getting better, there is nothing so nice as to rest in a hammock with blankets around you."

"I think Bunty is right, Bosun," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "And I think you and I should go ashore on this Secret Island and find out who this mysterious animal is that ..."

"Avast and belay! She may at that, Cap'n Wiggily, sir! Let's go ashore and solve the mystery!" barked Bosun.

"May I come?" asked Bunty. "I could bring with me my talk..."

... Soon Uncle Wiggily, Bosun, Buster, Bunty and Priscilla were on Secret Island. As they walked through the woods they heard once more that strange whistling. Then in front of a little house made of bark they saw Grannie Granny swinging a hammock. In the hammock there was something covered with blankets. And the whistling sound came from the hammock. You shall hear more about this mystery in the next story if the bathing suit doesn't go in swimming all alone and make the bath towel think the lifeguard is turning somersaults on the sand.

New Theatre Season Has Much To Offer

BY MAURY GWYNNE

With summer quickly drawing to a close, people are turning from the beaches, golf courses and summer resorts back to the home town for their fall and winter entertainment.

All across the country, amateur and professional theatrical companies are beginning rehearsals and getting ready for the return of the "season."

In Victoria the Totem Theatre, still in the first flush of its welcome here from Vancouver, is still being readied for the patrons who mourned the death of the York but were not here for the gala opening.

AMATEUR THEATRE

After this there will be a play for children, the first children's theatre offering in this city. This was decided on at the annual meeting of the group, stemming from the talks on children's theatre at the Dominion Drama Festival conference.

* * *

The idea of the children's theatre is fast catching on across Canada. Several theatre groups have already established a schedule of children's productions and the Vancouver Community Art Council has established a prize for the best play submitted this year.

A first prize of $75 is being offered by the Community Children's Theatre of Vancouver in a Canada-wide contest with a second prize of $25.

SEEK NEW MATERIAL

Contest rules may be had from Mrs. G. G. Woodward, 4360 W. 8th Avenue, Vancouver.

* * *

On the professional side of the fence, the Totem Theatre cast have been busy all week rehearsing for the Monday night opening of "For Love or Money."

A comedy, but a distinct change from "Gigi," this story brings the audience right up to date in New York.

It is the story of the theatre that pulls no punches, and gives a funny insight into the private lives of "matinee idols."

In the lead role of a Broadway actor will be Sam Payne. In supporting roles are Norma Macmillan, Muriel Ontkean, Kitty Dutcher, Verlie Cooter and Jack Droy.

The story is built around a young lady who, after being caught in a severe storm, stops off at the apartment of a famous actor to make a phone call.

NEIGHBOR APPEARS

Into the plot comes the wolf-type neighbor of the actor, the actor's leading lady and one or two other interested persons, with cupid taking big role.

Endless complications set in, and before the last curtain falls, a large quota of fun is had by both cast and audience.

Director of this laugh-filled story is the other half of the Totem managing team, Stuart Baker.

Stuart has had a trying week. After a collapse that landed him in hospital on opening night, he has had to direct from a chair on orders not to run around too much.

This hampered the director's plans for his show, but if rehearsals are any judge, his immobility did nothing to spoil the story.

* * *

Looking over past productions of the Totem in Vancouver an interesting sidelight has been brought to view.

Norma Macmillan and Muriel Ontkean, who have played role after role in which they verbally clawed one another's eyes out are really close friends.

HAS TWO CHILDREN

Miss Ontkean, who in real life is Mrs. Ontkean, is the mother of two lovely children, a boy and girl, and the wife of the Totem house manager.

But to Victoria audiences she will soon become known as a sharp-tongued shrew who seems to take an indecent delight in attacking poor little Norma.

* * *

From London, England, comes word that what may prove to be the biggest post-war theatre season is about to open.

Having a good current run in London through the summer season are "Guys and Dolls," and "The Moon is Blue," both American imports.

T. S. Elliot, Christopher Fry, Emlyn Williams, Terrance Rattigan, Charles Morgan and Wynyard Brown, all have shows ready or nearly ready.

Waiting to take lead roles in the new plays are such British heavyweights as Sir Laurence Olivier, Sir John Gielgud, Sir Ralph Richardson, Sir Lewis Casson, Dame Edith Evans and Dame Sybil Thorndike.

Among the peasants who are also scheduled to take heavy roles are Rex Harrison, Emlyn Williams, Lili Palmer, Vivien Leigh, Bea Lillie, Pamela Brown and John Mills.

These are only a few of the notable poor people who will help the knights and dames through the coming session of entertainment.

Like the magazines, movies and radio, the record companies get their hands on a good thing and work it till it's too weak to pay it's way.

The current kick is "themes." At least once a week, some record company comes out with the theme from a movie. It all started when somebody wrote some incidental music for Moulin Rouge, and the public took to it.

ALMOST RIDICULOUS

From there it has grown and grown until now it is almost ridiculous.

If memory serves correctly, Ruby Gentry was a tough western doll who could shoot the spots off a playing card in the dark. Beautiful, sure, but hardly the type that would inspire the listener to remember her with a musical theme.

Also getting a big play from the radio stations is the theme from "The Bad and the Beautiful," another story of a couple of toughies who could hardly be associated with lovely music.

Going along at this rate, the record companies could go way way back and come up with an endless supply of themes.

SPRINGS THROUGH AIR

The springtail insect folds its tail beneath its body and locks it there. To move, it releases the tail, which snaps suddenly downward with such force that the insect is thrown high into the air.

Plays Role of Villain

Georgians Purge More Beria Men

LONDON (AP)—Tiflis radio announced Saturday more dismissals in the campaign to purge the government of the Soviet Georgian Republic of Beria men. Latest victims were listed as Deputy Minister of State Control of the Republic Bizhanov and Deputy Minister of Local Industry Melidze.

Final Rites on Monday To Be for Former Nurse

Funeral services will be held for Miss Florence Edith Simpson, retired nurse and Red Cross worker.

Miss Simpson, 85, died Friday at 857 McClure Street, Victoria. Before her retirement here 18 years ago she was in charge of the Red Cross Lodge at Fort San, Sask.

A native of Nottingham, England, Miss Simpson was a graduate of York County Hospital. She went to Moose Jaw, Sask., in 1910, operating a private hospital there and later joining the staff of the tuberculosis hospital at Fort Qu'Appelle.

MEMBER OF IODE

She was formerly a member of the IODE and of the First Baptist Church.

Funeral srevices will be conducted by the Rev. G. R. Easter from Chaplin's Funeral Chapel at 1.30 p.m. Monday. Interment will be in Royal Oak Cemetery.

Apprentice Night Classes Arranged

The night life of apprentices in Greater Victoria has been decided upon, for at least one or two nights each week during the winter season.

The apprenticeship branch of the department of labor has nearly completed arrangements for night school classes to be held.

An obligation of an apprentice during his period of apprenticeship is to attend such classes in trade training and related subjects.

Night school courses may extend over four years.

SIX FOR CLASS

At least six persons are required for each class. Where there are insufficent apprentices the class is thrown open to public participation, at a slight charge.

Department of education, the labor department and trade unions co-operate in the classes, the unions often supplying qualified instructors.

Apprenticeship act currently covers 21 trades. There have been unofficial reports that the act may be widened, and that there will be more activity in trade schools than in the past, under provincial government planning.

ACCIDENTS REDUCED

A Vancouver police department traffic supperintendent has given credit to the 40-hour, five day week, for cutting accidents between 4 and 6 p.m. on Saturdays in the mainland city.

In June only 12 accidents occurred between those hours on Saturdays, as opposed to from 12 to 22 during the same hours in the remainder of the week.

The five-day week, with closure of many offices, has contributed to the decline, he the province the 40-hour five-said.

But in many other parts of day week has been of little help in the traffic problems, it was reported.

CERTIFICATES ISSUED

Seven certificates of bargaining authority were issued by the Labor Relations Board during the period of August 10 to 14, it was announced Saturday.

Two in the Victoria area concerned recent certification votes by the employees concerned, dropping from the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) in both cases.

Local 2802, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (AFL-TLC) was certified as bargaining authority for shingle mill employees of Horton Cedar Co., at Point Ellice, except office staff.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

TCL locals meeting this week include painters, meat cutters, Monday; plumbers, gas workers, theatre workers, Tuesday; bakery workers, CPR Federal union, Wednesday; projectionists, operating engineers, machinists, Thursday; teamsters, Friday.

No CCL locals have meetings scheduled.

Truck Overturns, Injuring Two Men

One man was admitted to hospital Saturday, and a second man given emergency treatment, after their truck overturned on the Four-Mile Hill.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said it was a miracle that the accident was not more serious.

GOING DOWNHILL

The 60 hundredweight former army truck they were driving down the hill swung to the left-hand side of the highway when the brakes were applied, climbed a bank and overturned on its side, police said.

Three-Year Jail Term Handed to Vernon Reid

A charge arising from a case last February has resulted in a three-year prison term for Vernon Reid, of Victoria.

Reid was found guilty of breaking and entry and theft from the Salvation Army Citadel, Pandora Avenue, in speedy trial before Judge J. B. Clearihue in County Court on Friday.

The safe had held about $100 in cash and $200 in bearer bonds. It was found opened and abandoned on Millstream Road, Langford.

J. Ronald Grant was defense counsel, and Alan Bigelow was crown counsel.

Find of Gems Revives Mine

NEW YORK (NANA)—A recent discovery of two major gems in an old sapphire field 200 miles inland from Rockhamton, in Australia, has brought back to life both the mine, which was believed to have been worked out, and the small neighboring community in Queensland's "back-of-beyond" country, which had become a ghost town.

A dispatch to New Commonwealth of London, reports that a U.S. concern is making plans to mine the Anakie field, where the precious big blue gems were encountered.

Driver Remanded In Police Custody

NURSERY SCHOOL TO REOPEN

September 8th is back-to-school day for the littlest tots, too, at the Greater Victoria Nursery School, 2166 Oak Bay Avenue. Morning classes will be resumed for children from two to four years, followed by afternoon sessions for the five-year-olds.

A boon to harassed mothers, the Greater Victoria Nursery School is a parents' co-operative for the pre-primary development of children from two to six. Laying special stress upon social development, the school provides a balanced program of supervised routines and constructive play, both inside and out in the pleasant large playyard. Music, rhythm, painting, and for the five-year-olds special projects and carpentry, all form a part of the nursery school day, and serve to stimulate creative expression and to develop motor skill. On hand to guide the children is a staff of trained teachers under the supervision of Mrs. E. D. Durrant (formerly Dorothy Doyle), graduate of the Chicago Teachers' College. Film Will Be Shown After Park Service

Another of the series of popular Sunday night Gospel services in Beacon Hill Park will be staged this week by the "Youth of Christ" organization with Bill Bennett, director for Victoria and Vancouver Island, as master of ceremonies.

The service will commence at 7.30 p.m. in Cameron Memorial Pavilion.

The Gospel message will be given by Rev. Peter Allinger, president and dean of Audio-Visual College, Vancouver. The Nurses' Christian Fellowship will attend.

A premiere showing in Victoria of the film "Twice Convicted" will be given following the service.

Island Private Schools Given General Acclaim

Vancouver Island private schools, known throughout the world for their excellent scholastic standing, pride themselves on graduating students fit to take prominent places in any field of endeavor.

The schools place emphasis on all the newest aspects of education, but at the same time give students a broad and fundamental background of classical literature, music and art that provides a proper perspective to learning.

DEVELOP TASTE

It has been found that such a background develops in the individual a sense of taste and values that will stay with him and add to his stature, even in the most matter-of-fact pursuits of everyday existence.

Emphasizing a "sound mind in a sound body," private schools of Victoria and Vancouver Island provide a well-rounded athletic program.

The retiring child who ordinarily would refrain from taking part in games is given confidence and encouragement, and is launched into an activity that would otherwise be lost to him for life.

In these, each student comes to enjoy the long practice required to excel, the exhilaration of actual competition, and the easy comaraderie of the games field.

Private schools have never failed in their aim of sending capable men and women on to colleges and universities, and their records of the schools' "old boys" or "old girls" who have made names for themselves in business, professions and the armed services more than prove the worth of their maintaining such high objectives and ideals.

Gen. Wainwright Still Serious

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—The aging hero of Bataan, Gen. Jonathan Wainwright was still in a serious condition here Saturday. He was admitted to hospital July 6 after a reported stroke. The general spent four years in a Japanese prison camp during the Second World War after he surrendered his army forces at the fall of Bantaan.

ROME (AP) — Italy's new Pro-Western Premier, Giuseppe Pella, Saturday won his first parliamentary test, a senate vote of confidence. Pella now must face a similar vote in chamber of deputies, probably early next week.

DEADLY C-BOMB PREDICTED

U.S. and Britain Divided on Views On Big Four Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Britain are reported divided over whether to agree to discuss general international tensions with Russia at a proposed Big Four meeting on Germany.

Diplomatic officials report that Britain favors such an agreement and the United States does not. France was described as tending to support the United States view.

The division has developed at the very outset of three-power talks at Paris on a new note to Moscow regarding a Big Four session. The situation reflects the same basic difference between London and Washington over how to deal with the Communist bloc which has characterized their clashing policies on Korea in the present United Nations assembly session.

At the UN, Britain has favored a kind of round-table conference to follow up the Korean armistice and has stood for the inclusion of both Russia and India. The United States has been willing to accept Russia only as a member of the Communist group at the proposed negotiations and has objected to including any neutral such as India.

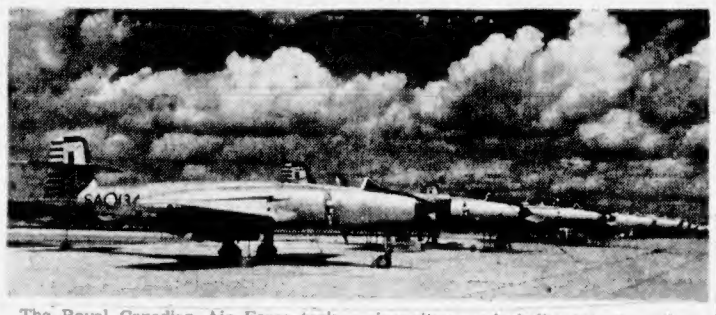

In other words, the United States has wanted the Korean political conference to be a meeting of two sides concerned with Korean unification and not a round-table session which might roam over a variety of Far Eastern issues such as the future of Formosa and UN membership for Red China.

AGREEMENT EXPECTED

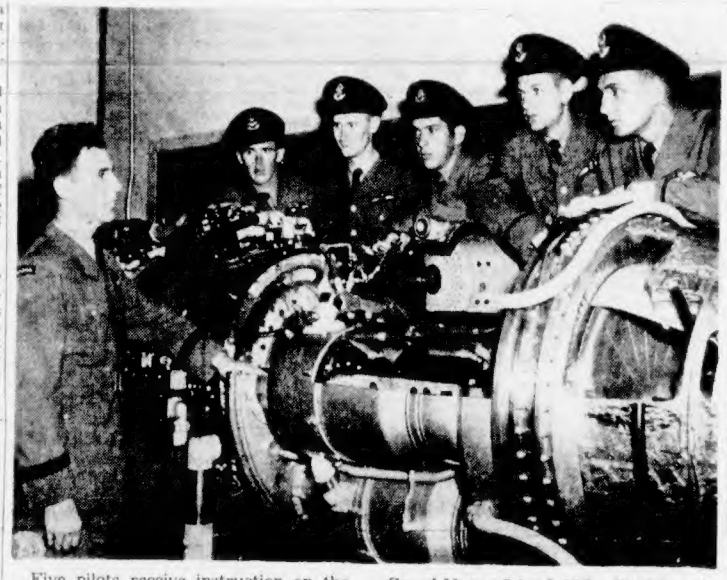

Diplomats here said that they were reasonably certain that despite their different approaches to writing a new note to Russia on Germany, the United States and Britain, together with France, will be able rather quickly to agree on a line to be taken.

CF-100 Proves Its Value

The Royal Canadian Air Force took wraps off its new jet-interceptor plane, the CF-100, at the North Bay, Ont., air base Thursday. A six-hour ground-and-air demonstration convinced visiting witnesses, including newsmen, that the all-weather aircraft is all it is reputed to be. Here is a line-up of the planes on the North Bay tarmac.

Cobalt Weapon's Radiation Would Last for Full Year

LONDON (UP)—A British nuclear scientist warned the world Saturday to watch out for the C-bomb.

The bomb would be a deadly refinement of the hydrogen bomb, which the Russians have learned to produce along with the United States.

Now that the atomic method of destruction appears to have struck a balance on both sides of the Iron Curtain, some physicists have quietly put aside their data on the A-bomb and H-bomb. They have started, instead, a new docket under the initial "C" for cobalt, according to the scientist who asked not to be identified.

STILL ONLY IDEA

The cobalt bomb, as far as can be ascertained, is still only an idea. But the scientist said its operation would depend on "simple and well-established" principles which leave little doubt as to its feasibility.

The idea is to make a bomb big enough and powerful enough to release a radioactive dust that would contaminate most of the world and stay active for a year or more.

The scientist said the bomb would be made from cobalt which costs about $2,000 a ton.

According to this informant, the C-bomb could be made in three parts beginning with an ordinary A-bomb in the centre.

The whole contraption would then be packed in a thick shell of cobalt which would be blasted into a fine dust giving a "penetrating radiation lasting for at least a year."

The scientist estimated about 10,000 tons of cobalt would be enough to make a radioactive dust settle everywhere, both in and out of doors, and remain lethal over a protracted period.

VARIED DISTRIBUTION

But he believes it unlikely that a uniform distribution could be achieved everywhere. Some parts of the earth's surface could remain "relatively free" while others would receive a bigger dose.

He is convinced, however, that the next step along the road to scientific destruction will be toward the C-bomb.

Idea Born In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The possibility of a race-killing C-bomb was first suggested by an American scientist, Prof. Leo Szilard.

Szilard estimated that an H-bomb containing 500 tons of heavy hydrogen could radioactivate enough cobalt, built into the bomb as a liner, to make all human beings gradually sicken and die.

FOUR PREMISES

He based his idea on four premises: (1) That enough heavy hydrogen and cobalt could be built into the bomb, or bombs, to meet the theoretical requirements, (2) that the bomb would go off, (3) that the radioactive cobalt dust resulting from the explosion would settle uniformly on the earth, and (4) that some people, in order to kill off all other peoples, would be willing to kill themselves.

He suggested the possibility that Russia might develop such a bomb and use its existence to back up an ultimatum to the United States.

Szilard's idea was disclosed at a University of Chicago round table broadcast in February, 1950.

EXHAUSTIVE ANALYSIS

Dr. James R. Arnold of the University of Chicago Institute for Nuclear Studies subjected Szilard's figures to exhaustive analysis and produced the conclusion that to generate fatal radioactive dust in the amounts stipulated, it would be necessary to use, in one bomb or many, around 10,000 tons of heavy hydrogen and 100,000 tons of cobalt.

"To make such a bomb would require "a full-scale effort by a major country over many years," Arnold said.

Coast Area Combed In Aerial Search

VANCOUVER (CP)—Search planes investigating latest clues in the disappearance of a New Mexico oilman and four other persons had only negative results to report Saturday.

Twenty-nine U.S. and Canadian service planes were in the air along with a number of private craft. Saturday's search, aided by clear weather, extended over thousands of square miles of territory around the point where Ellis Hall, his wife, two daughters and 17-year-old Patrick Hibben disappeared in Hall's plane Monday.

Still being followed up were reports by loggers on northern Revillagigedo Island they had seen a ball of fire Monday night. A fishtrap tender, operating a few miles from the loggers, said he had heard a plane's engines die out suddenly that evening and a search plane saw two trees with clipped tops, which might have been broken by a plane.

The plane vanished on a flight from Annette Island to Bellingham, Wash. The search has been concentrated in the vicinity of Annette.

Meanwhile, a second private plane is reported missing in northern British Columbia. Search and rescue officials in Vancouver said that a single-engined aircraft piloted by a bush pilot named Peterson of Atlin, B.C., has been missing since Thursday.

North River Yields Body Of Fisherman

BURNS LAKE, B.C. (BUP)—RCMP at Burns Lake Saturday night disclosed that the body of Fred T. Whiting, of Chicago, vice-president of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, has been found in the icy waters of the Morice River in northern B.C., where he had been trout fishing.

An RCMP corporal, with a game warden and a big game guide, found the body Saturday afternoon after about 10 hours of dragging the river. A coroner's inquiry has been held. The cause of death was drowning. There is no suspicions of foul play.

The body will be flown to Seattle today.

GIs Jubilant, ROKs Furious On Release

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The Communists released 150 shouting and laughing Americans from Red prison camps Sunday and told the United Nations command another 150 would be sent home Monday.

While the Americans exchanged Sunday generally were in high spirits, Republic of Korea troops coming back from the Red northland were burning mad.

South Korean Red Cross workers said the Republic of Korea troops demanded that the Reds release all of the ROK soldiers being held in the north.

Earlier accounts said thousands of South Koreans were being held back to do forced labor for the Reds, including building airfields and rehabilitating war wrecked buildings and railroads.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department believes prospects for international control of atomic energy are "dim" because of Russia's uncompromising stand on the question.

Nevertheless, it says the United States still favors international control and will cooperate with the United Nations on any effective plan.

The statements came from Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, acting secretary of state, in the wake of confirmation here that the Soviets have succeeded in exploding some kind of hydrogen device.

Smith's report was made public Saturday by the office of Senator Paul Wiley (Rep., Wis.), chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who is in New York attending the UN Assembly.

ASSURANCE ASKED

Wiley had asked for assurance from the state department that the "full impact" of increasing atomic programs in foreign lands "is adequately reflected in our current military and diplomatic plans and policies."

In his reply, Smith recommended a greater exchange of atomic energy information with allied countries, adding that this did not necessarily mean the disclosure of classified information.

Malenkov Blasts Adenauer

LONDON (AP)—The Kremlin Sunday accused West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of leading Germany down the road to war in a bitter broadcast blast by Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov.

It made a new call for a quick German peace conference.

Malenkov's speech was addressed to East German Government leaders who were summoned to Moscow last week for urgent talks at the Kremlin. They have been entertained lavishly since their arrival in Moscow Thursday night.

Allies Fear Soviet Trap In Air Plan

BERLIN (AP)—The Western Allies are turning down Russia's proposal for just one big air corridor to Berlin because they fear it might prove a trap in case of another blockade, an informed Allied source disclosed Saturday.

The West proved once—during the 1948-49 blockade—that it could feed Berlin by air through the existing system of three 20-mile-wide corridors across Soviet-occupied East Germany.

Hungry Prisoners Return to Cells

MONROE, Wash., (AP)—Famished but still sullenly defiant, 150 young prisoners who took part in Thursday's riot and arson were herded back to their cells Saturday at the Washington State Reformatory.

For two nights and most of two days they had been kept clustered on the reformatory baseball field under a ring of guard's guns.

Their only food was a little in cans taken from the reformatory cannery the night of the riot, when five buildings were put to the torch and destroyed. They had water, but nothing else to drink.

Once inside, they wolfed down sandwiches and hot coffee.

The return to their cells had been delayed while reformatory officials made a thorough search of all buildings for hidden weapons. A varied collection of homemade and reformatory kitchen knives was turned up.

Single file, the rioters were given careful "shakedown" before they were allowed back in the cellhouses. No weapons were found. Any they had were believed buried in the yard.

Four of the rioters were missing from the ranks of those outside. One was killed and three wounded Thursday night when guards said a group tried to rush the walls.

Verdict Still Awaited On CPA Application

BY TOM GREEN
The Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, August 22—Official sources said here Saturday night it is unlikely that the decision of the government in the matter of the application of Canadian Pacific Airlines to operate an air cargo service between Vancouver and Montreal, will be given out for at least one month and possibly two.

The hearings, which occupied nearly a month, were held in March before the air transport board, with Trans-Canada Airlines opposing the application. The board studied the large amount of evidence and sent a digest and recommendation to Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier some time in June.

However, the Coronation and the general election kept the government from giving attention to the matter. Now it is understood the subject will come up for discussion by the cabinet, not at its next meeting which is cheduled for September 9, but at a later meeting.

In the past the feeling of the government has been that TCA was the "chosen instrument" and that it would require a very powerful argument for the administration to change its mind.

Under the present law the air transport board does not have the power to grant an airline, which is also a surface carrier, a charter.

Thugs Attack Two Chinese

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bandits in North Vancouver and New Westminster attacked elderly Chinese men in separate assaults Friday night and early Saturday — but went empty-handed in both instances.

Bomb Threat Brings Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—William Wetteskow, 30, was charged in police court Saturday with trying to blast his way into a job, and was remanded one week for medical examination.

Churchill Title London Rumor

LONDON (CP) — The mass circulation Sunday Pictorial says Queen Elizabeth is thinking of offering Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill a Dukedom. This would ease Churchill, who is not in good health, into the House of Lords.

In the past Churchill is reported to have refused all offers of elevation to the peerage as he could then no longer be prime minister.

A dukedom is the second highest rung in British aristocracy. Only dukes "of the royal blood" have higher ranking. Churchill is a descendant of the Duke of Marlborough.

Rumors that Sir Winston would retire have circulated around London since June 27 when his doctors announced he had been ordered to take a long rest to avoid a complete physical breakdown.

Danger Signs Explained

Rumors were rife in the area. One persistent theory was that a gas main had broken and the block was full of escaping gas.

Man Claims He Killed Boy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police spent Saturday checking the story of a 33-year-old man who walked into headquarters and confessed to the killing of an eight-year-old boy almost six years ago.

Refusing to identify the man, the police quoted him as saying he was responsible for the slaying of the boy, Roddy Moore, who was bludgeoned to death while on his way home from school, October 18, 1947. The murder was unsolved. Medical authorities testified it was not a sex crime.

Police said the man they are holding admitted he was recently released from a mental institution. He is the first man to be held in connection with the brutal killing since the boy's body was found in underbrush, following a search by hundreds of police and volunteers, following the killing.

GAVE WRONG NAME

Police Chief Walter Mulligan said the suspect walked into headquarters Friday night and said "I'm the man who murdered Roddy McDonald."

He later corrected the name, and said "I'm the man who killed Roddy Moore," the chief said.

The man admitted he had been only recently released from a mental hospital, and also had been treated in several others, giving rise to the belief that his confession may be a fake.

"He may be a complete nut, and his story totally untrue, but we try to leave no stone unturned in Vancouver's unsolved murders," said the chief.
